To

Prof. James Irving Manatt, Ph.D., LL.D.,

the ardent Hellenist and graceful writer, whose scholarship, wit, and sympathy have enabled us to enter so fully into our Classical inheritance,

this book is respectfully dedicated.

FORWARD

Foreword

The scene-this hill that overlooks the town;
The actors-only boys that grew to men;
The time elapsed-just four years of life;
The plot-a simple theme of youth and hope,
In which the actors sought to learn what life
Should mean, and came to love thee, Alma Mater, too;
The crisis-just that time when boys awake,
And learn to play the man, when manhood sees
The world is bigger far than boyhood dreamed,
And more than gilt and glitter tempts pursuit.
So we have staged our little play, and now
The curtain falls, a new cast takes the stage.
May we be pardoned then if we present
In brief synopsis what the years have worked,
And pledge to Alma Mater life-long love,
Although the curtain's down, and we are gone?

CLASS OF 1909

As the Tale Was Told to Jupiter

ONCE upon a time there was a great banquet, and the most famous men of all the land were gathered at Caproni's Hostelry. To this resort came Mars, the God of War, scenting trouble, and desirous of beholding these mighty men whose renown had reached even to the topmost pinnacle of Mt. Olympus. And along with Mars came Venus, to protect the interest of her favorite, Strickler, and to watch over some others, such as Harry Smith and Dodge, whose winning ways brought love to every tender heart.

As the deities entered the palatial hall and stood invisible to human sight, their eyes beheld a marvelous spectacle. Seated in the thrones of honor were the noble orators. There was Stone, his brain protruding with magniloquent thoughts. Beside him, Babcock, with chest thrown out and Faunce-like air, answering "Yes, yes," to all questions asked, disputing with Apollo, Larrabee, on subjects of greatest moment . . .

Near them was Dennie, with set face, holding with might and main a chariot marked in white letters "Water," while all around were friends striving to drag him from it. Roberts, with contented smile, listened with rapt attention to his prophet, Johnson, while Chafee and Goodspeed acted Damon and Pythias in a corner. All the while sparkling nectar flowed like the gentle Niagara Falls, and from the vast assemblage came a peaceful, humming murmur.

Then outspoke Mars, "I see my very image there; they call him Kirley." But Venus sighed, "My soul is quite entranced by Mayhew's legs," and then, "How quiet it all seems; it is the lull before the storm." But Mars pricked up his ears and cried, "And now the storm has come."

For just at that moment came a sound as of a north-east gale, and with a mighty gust of wind and peels of thunder, Poland, Champlin and Richmond blew in. Charlie Hughes attempted to pacify the elements by a few words of fatherly advice, but being the baby of the class he was disregarded. Pandemonium reigned supreme. The devotees of Rhode Island Hall clamored for blood, but compromised by cutting up a skeleton. This unexpectedly turned out to be Littlefield, and mid shrieks of woe and lamentations the entire company turned to more diverting entertainment. "London" Miller, by request, did the "Picadilly Glide" upon a table, while Burbank and Whitmarsh showed their marvelous skill upon parallel bars. Buffum remarked disdainfully that one bar was enough for him, and Butterworth, also envious, proceeded to raise on high balls of tremendous size and countless in number until he dropped from weariness. Wheeler, mindful of his dignity, mounted upon an imposing "rostrum" and, hoping to pour oil upon the troubled waters, delivered his entire Dartmouth Debate speech. Even Don Clark said something, but just what was never known, as at that moment Eddie Mayer started to sing and the multitude was momentarily hushed. "Chick" Raymond made the first move. There was murder in his eye as he searched savagely in his pocket for a baseball bat. But Beytes rushed ahead and seized the yodelling wretch. Poor Eddie had no chance. The crowd closed in and wreaked their vengeance.

During the scene of strife and turmoil the God of War looked on with proud, exulting mien, but Venus trembled at the awful sight. "Tell me," she whispered, "Is there no one here who is not crazy? Has not 1909 one man who has still kept his senses?"

"Nay," Mars replied, "You do not understand. I know that they are heroes bold. All except one, and he, poor soul, is quite demented. Behold him there under the table. The one with the wearied look and hopeless eye, holding a notebook in his fevered hand. He'll be in Butler's soon, for that is Chase taking down data for the yearly LIBER."

The strife and turmoil thickened and the situation grew grim. But hold! Apollo Larrabee tries to calm the troubled spirits. In vain his words strike the empty air. It is now that Babcock sees his chance, and so with the utmost confidence of a prominent man compels the attention of his less prominent classmates. With soothing words he preserved order and his own dignity.

Like all banquets, this most famous banquet adjourned at last. While Mars and Venus, and the rest of the deities, betook themselves to Olympus, the banqueters straggled up to their abodes on the Hill with the feeling that at least the evening's entertainment had been a unique experience.

"Jary" first smelled the soft, gentle, zephyr winds June 23, 1886, in the retiring village of Westerly, R. I. The Westerly High School got rid of him somehow or other, and as he had an insatiable desire to learn mechanics, he meandered up to Brown where he has become quite some of a shark, although he will not admit it. On the football field he has done considerable damage to the hearts of nervous spectators. Upon the acquisition of a degree, he will try to throttle the automobile business.

THOMAS PARKER AYER

Φ K Ψ

LIBER Board (3) (4).

All Merrimac, N. H., was agog on April 3, 1886, when "Tommy" joined the town clerk's list of resident members. Manchester High School taught our hero enough to enter our ranks. Among his college honors the following may be mentioned as characteristic: Promoter and Member of the John Hay Club, Member of Question Club of Intellectual Inquiry (see Pop Munro), and the front seat in chapel for four years. After this painful academic life is ended, "Tommy" will take a course in the Harvard Affinity School.

GEORGE WARREN BABCOCK

Σ Φ Δ

B. M. C. Durfee High School Club
(1) (2) (3) (4); Secretary (3);
Junior Week Committee (3).

"Bab" was another victim of Fall River in 1887. He says his favorite church is Joseph Church, but he has never gone so far as to formulate any opinion of chapel. "Bab" and Bert Smith have been sources of mutual inspiration all through their course, but divergent paths in life demand that their future reciprocal blessings be in the nature of absent treatment.

HAROLD PEMBERTON

BABCOCK Ψ Υ

Ball Committee (3); Assistant Manager 'Varsity Baseball Team (3); Cercle Francais (4); Chairman Celebration Committee (4); Sock and Buskin (4); Manager Wrestling Association (4); Manager 'Varsity Baseball Team (4); Cammarian Club (4).

"Splitz" came to college in order to become prominent. He succeeded. As manager of this year's baseball team he has given us an unparalleled schedule and has worked unceasingly for the good of the college. Incidentally, "Splitz" is a good sport, a fascinating fusser, and a wonderful "raconteur" of funny stories. Everybody wants him on a party, and he always helps in a good time. He says he is going to "push the grunts out of pig iron" when he leaves. Perhaps that means work. We don't know.

Committee (3); Junior LIBER Editor (3); Managing Editor (4).

Behold the Managing Editor of this publication. "Herb" was born twenty-two years ago in Danielson, Conn., and prepared at Worcester Academy. While at Brown he has shown that he is an exceptionally good student and is interested in the things which are really worth while. The time was when he enjoyed life and was a man of leisure, but now he spends many weary hours in the LIBER room sharing the gloom of the Editor-in-chief. Talking about "Billy Mac" and telephoning are his hobbies. Harvard Law School looks good in his mind's eye.

ROBERT KERSHAW BENNETT

Σ Δ K

Class Gym. Team (2); Phi Beta Kappa (3).

Rollicking "Robbie" has flourished here for four years, living on intellectual food and sapping up knowledge. The net result is a Phi Beta Kappa key, which he carries around on his girdle. In a few months he expects to teach and impart some of his stored up learning to others.

LEON HENRY BEYTES $\Sigma \Phi \Delta$

Class Football (1) ; 'Varsity Football
(3) (4).

"Beyt" came to the shrine of Old Brown as a pilgrim from Plymouth, Mass., where he was born Sept. 25, 1886, somewhere near the famous rock. He entered our ranks as an uncultured engineer, and has been acting most abominably between recitations with the rest of his gang. The way he picks out knot holes in the opposing line when playing football is no cheap imitation. He will long be remembered as the originator of the famous "shush."

WILLIAM BICHWIT

William came to college to work, and so elected none but the hardest courses. He was so faithful that he was rewarded with high marks, even to the dignity of "H" in English 15 and Hebrew. When he leaves our loving midst he hopes to enter another circle of learning, probably Harvard.

IRVING WHITMAN BOGLE

$\Theta \Delta X$

Class Gym. Team (1) (2) ; Mandolin Club (2) (3) (4) ; Mandolin Quartet (4) ; LIBER Board (3) (4) ; Vaudeville Club (4).

Irving of the smiles comes from Fall River, and says that the only thing in life he regrets is his inability to grow stout. It is whispered, also, his declaration springs from sentimental reasons. Well away, Cupid, well away! He also asserts that he is not a grind, but merely a student. We believe him.

CLARENCE WILLIAM

BOSWORTH $\Delta T \Delta$

Hail to the son of Attawangan, Conn., U. S. A. ! Now one of Georgiaville's most highly esteemed citizens, he still has time to get in to the college life "on the side." The only shadow that ever fell across his reputation is that which comes from his frequent journeyings to the State House, where it is rumored that he is one of General Brayton's closest admirers. After leaving the Hill, he will apply the principles of education as interpreted by Jake—in instilling the youth of our country with those things which they should know.

FREDERICK MAY BOYCE

 $\Sigma \Phi \Delta$

Phi Beta Kappa (3); William Gaston Scholarship (4).

One degree evidently wasn't enough for Frederick to capture in his quadrennial sojourn in this intellectual environment. So he has spent his spare time taking extra courses for which he is to get two sheepskins. He expects to attend the commencement baseball game immediately after leaving college.

CHARLES WALTER BRIGGS

 $\Psi \Upsilon$

Sock and Buskin (1) (2) (3) (4).

"Charlie" was born in Worcester, Mass., on Oct. 17, 1885. After an expensive "Prep" school career at the Norwich Free Academy, he decided to become a "college man." Much of his time is spent at his books, although it is said he spends some time before the mirror admiring the effect of a new suit and startling neck-tie upon his shapely figure. He goes into business next year, and we can guarantee his success, as his genius in that line is already well developed.

CHARLES LEWIS BRIGHTMAN

 $\Sigma \Phi \Delta$

Class Football Team (2); Class Baseball Team (2); Phi Beta Kappa (3); George Ide Chace Scholarship (4).

This man of brains was born in Providence, Dec. 20, 1883. By a judicious selection of courses "Bright" has been able to get in line for two degrees while many of his companions have been frantically scrambling after one. When "Charlie" leaves this hill there will be room for two in the studious strata of our academic atmosphere.

FRED REED BUDLONG A $\Delta \Phi$

Tennis Team (1) (2) (3); Runner up N. E. I. T. A. (2); College Champion (2) (3); Hockey Team (1) (4); Captain (4); The Owls (2); Pi Kappa (3); Baseball Team (2) (3); Junior Prom Committee (4); Cammarian Club (4).

There was a great addition to the baseball material of the country, although it was not known at the time, when Fred was born in Providence, April 10, 1887. Soon after this event he teased his father to get him a game of parlor baseball, and worked out the science of the game right then and there. He came to Brown with a good baseball vocabulary and imposing-looking batting average. Dr. Sexton immediately gave him special instructions for looking tough. When he leaves Brown he will do the public.

WILLIAM POTTER BUFFUM,
JR. A Δ Φ

Class Football Team (2); Sophomore Ball Committee (2); Class Track Team (3); Pi Kappa (3); Mandolin Club (3) (4); Captain and Manager Class Relay Team (4).

"Billy" was born at Middletown, R. I., in the year of our Lord 1888. He received his start toward the attainment of "culture" at St. George's School, and then walked (he is a great walker) proudly to Brown in order "to work and have a good time." He has been stunting his growth slowly but surely by his persistent work in the laboratories. As an athlete and musician "Billy" has been making a name for himself, but the most salient feature of his college career has been his fussing. As a greensward artist in the Salome dance he will long be remembered by the Class of 1910. Harvard Medical School will be his repository next year.

STUART RUSSELL BUGBEE
B @ II

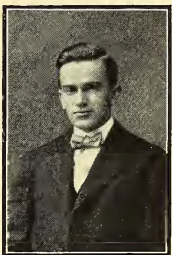

Class Football Team (2); 'Varsity Swimming Team (2) (3) (4); Junior Week Committee (3); Musical Clubs (3); Civics Club (2) (3) (4).

"Bug" is a resident of North Attleboro, where he was born on Dec. 19, 1888. After four years at the North Attleboro High School he entered our ranks for a long-distance academic swim. He is one of the mainstays of the "Brown Tanks," but is no less a student than a water rat. Next year he will enter the business world and help to swell the tidal wave of prosperity set in motion by the news of Taft's election.

All of the credit of the artitorial policy of this year's LIBER is due to Johnny's orginality of head and pen. They say that he used to smile before he came to college, but since he invested his time and money in the musical clubs he wears a look of despondency and financial depression. "Phil" was introduced into East Side society on Oct. 6, 1886. As he wanted to follow in the footsteps of his big brother he came to Brown by the Hope Street High School route. "Phil" is one of the most loyal men in our class, and has never been known to miss any of our class rushes, celebrations, or suppers. He is absolutely harmless except when practicing on his cornet, at which time it is advisable to keep at a safe distance. He has not begun to make plans for the future.

In East Acworth, N. H., this lover of leisure first showed signs of life. The Irish farm hand cried, "Whist, 'tis a foine boy," and the next week "Ray" was a master of bid whist. He used to heave stones at the cows when he was driving them home and thus discovered the mysteries of pitching. When his pile is made, he's going to sit back in his easy chair and tell his kids about some great class games, and especially how to play bid whist.

Most of the day and a part of the night he plays bid whist with "Ray" Buss, although Keith's and other health resorts claim some of his time. When "Chic" first saw the sunrise in Somerset, Mass., along about 1889, you can imagine that he was not exactly what is termed "a wise guy," nor could he justly claim that title when he first climbed College Hill, after a rather desultory voyage from Fall River, but he has turned out to be so apt a student that he is now a veritable encyclopedia, with information to offer in regard to anything. GEORGE HENRY CAMPBELL
A T Ω

George has a generous slice of Brown spirit, although he is a man of quiet habits. He made his initial bow to the world on May 20, 1886, in Providence. As his first taste of education at the Technical High School did not appease his appetite he has been with us for the last four years. Brown evidently has not entirely satisfied his appetite, for he will spend a year at Cornell after leaving the Engineering Building.

George arrived in the bibulous town of Norwich some twenty-three years ago. He showed exceptionally good judgment in his adolescence by going to St. Paul's School, Garden City, thence to Providence, where he joined Brown's anti-work gang. He is a confirmed Langdonite, partly because Courtney is a golf player, and partly because he is a good sport (George has propensities towards both these attainments). As he desired to make the most of his time this year he has not been in the habit of attending chapel. When he leaves the class rooms of "Pop" Munro and "Pop" Poland, he will either rusticate in the cotton mill business or be a runner-up in some broker's office.

As Henry would not relish the thought of being called a "bromide" we will label him a "sulphide," for the sake of the argument. Twenty-one years ago Henry began to scowl and show some promise of the massive intellect and eagle eye which have helped him to hold his own in Sphinx meetings. St. George's School fostered his predilections and Brown has offered him its most intellectual problems. He simply dotes on such abstruse thinking machines as Spinoza, Schopenhauer and Kant. Henry is just too sweet for anything when he takes the part of a girl in our plays. After college is over he will try to find an affinity.

Who has ever seen "Newt" when he hadn't a jovial smile and a cheery greeting for all whom he knew? While some of us have been inclined to look only at the hole in the doughnut of our college life, he has tried to deflect our attention to the rim, and with happy optimism has made us feel that there is always a sunny side to life. We shall remember "Newt," not only as Editor-in-chief of this book, but also as a royal good fellow,—as ready to sympathize as he was to laugh, with as keen an appreciation of the serious as of the humorous side of life. He is one of the "Few Better Cribbers," a society of which we publicly disapprove, but privately consider to be one of the greatest honors in the University. Yet Albert is not a grind. Moses, strange to relate, was not born in the bulrushes, but at Saba, Dutch West Indies, July 3, 1883. He was quite won over by the cordiality of Theron when he came to Providence to look the corporation over, and so, since he had passed "Entrance English" successfully, and did not want to be thought ungrateful, he took the fatal step. "Huckie," known as "Gasoline George," was born in 1886, on the shores of Martha's Vineyard, where the fresh sea air and long-shore life nourished a specimen which thrives even amidst the debilitating influence of our academic life. That he can handle a pole as well as a tiller was shown by the placing of his name with the other record holders in the trophy room of the Union. "Huckie" is no less an engineer than an athlete. He has devoted his spare time to work on marine engines and other mechanical devices, and displays a dormant ray of genius in these lines; withal, he is a hearty, good fellow.

Celebration Committee (2); Class Gym. Team (1) (2); Union House Committee (4); Y. M. C. A. General Secretary (4).

Notwithstanding the fact that he is the power behind the throne in the Y. M. C. A., "Bill" is a good sort of a fellow. Shortly after he was born in Providence, in 1886, he learned that he was the class baby of '84. This decided him to come to Brown and uphold the honor of that illustrious class. "Bill" got in right with Prexy in his Junior year and served him in the capacity of "The Private Secretary." The jump from the Secretary job to the Senator Aldrich position of the Y. M. C. A. was easy and natural enough. He will get another cinch job upon leaving these green pastures.

The lusty bawl "Yo-Ho!" reverberated through the still morning air of Nayatt on July 16, 1886. "Yo-Ho!" said the father, "It's a boy, and such a fine boy!" So we all think now, for "Don" has won his way into the hearts of his classmates. He has stimulated Brown spirit and won renown for himself as a composer of words and music. His masterpiece may be said to be our famous Junior Cruise song, without which the expedition would certainly have seemed tame. "Don" is a devotee of "Courtney," "Tom" Crosby and "Pop" Poland. Next year he will recuperate from the strain of his college course as a member of "the elite."

The saintly Clarence received a serious handicap when he turned up three and twenty years ago among such unfriendly surroundings as he found at the anti-prohibition town of Rumford, R. I. He lost none of his religious fervor, however, and kept a tight grip on his morals. Arriving on the Hill via the East Providence High School, he immediately turned on the dim religious light. He is now the main squeeze and big stick of that corrupt and greedy corporation, the Y. M. C. A. After the graduation exercises in the first Baptist Church are over he does not know whether he will go into business for a year, or enter a Theological Seminary directly.

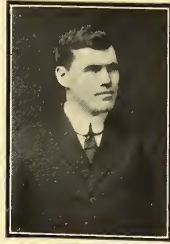

BERNARD ALOYSIUS KEENAN

Bernard is one of the quieter members of our class, but those who know him best recognize him as one of its ablest men. He says he came to college to attain culture, and, if an average of eight or nine courses a term has not given it to him, we do not know what will. He evidently thinks he does though, for he has announced his determination of continuing his studies next year.

As "Brown's big left tackle," "Pop" has been bucking lines for four years. Henceforth, however, he will be occupied with lines of levels and benches. "Pop" has become so well known as our "great tower of strength" on the gridiron, that anything we might say further about him would be superfluous. "He had all the bones and joints of other men without any of their proportions. Erect, his stature surpassed that of his fellows; though seated, he appeared within the ordinary limits of the race."

When Harry first graced Port Norris, N. J., with his presence, in January, 1886, the wise men had to acknowledge that this baby "had some class." Peddie Institute turned him out as one of its products, and then he entered our academic grist mill. He is "quite some" of a warbler, and the Poison Ivy Quartet would be "pretty crude" without his interpretation of the popular lullabies. Harry's sterling character will be his strongest asset when he enters the cold, damp business world.

JOHN RAYMOND LAPHAM

"Lap" claims that April, 1886, and West Medway, Mass., are the time and the place. Medway High School let him loose among us. After he succeeds in worrying his degree of B.S. in C.E. out of the faculty, he is going to get busy and show the world a few things along some unknown line.

He has been trying hard to uplift the standards of our monthly magazine and deserves no little praise for his trouble. Raising money for the track team has been his other chief avocation. He will probably "get in right" somewhere when he leaves college.

Everybody knows Lasker and respects his genius. He was born in Russia in 1883, but a wise Star of the West led him to Providence, and so preserved this massive intellect from the danger of destruction by bombs before it had attained its full development. For six months he attended Technical High School and then procured his naturalization papers from "Theron." Next year he will begin applying his brain to problems of Civil Engineering.

"Burt" was born in Newport, N. H., on Feb. 24, 1886. He received his preparatory school training at Medina High School, from which he went to Syracuse. Ivory is one of the cleverest men in his class, for he can not only inveigle "ads" from the "tightest" of our city business houses for the LIBER BRUNENSIS, but he has also increased the subscription list of the Brunonian appreciably. With a pleasing personality and a clear, keen business head for assets, Ivory will surely attain success in the business world which he expects to enter after June 17th.

"Mac" hasn't made a big noise or grand splurge around college, but what he has attempted he has done well. Like the great majority of our great and glorious class he has to own up to Providence and Hope St. High for his place of birth and kindergarten. He has not planned anything out in cold blood for the future, as yet.

LOUIS AUGUSTINE MCCOY

Louis came to Brown in order to get away from Pawtucket. From an educational standpoint, he claims that Horace Mann has done the most for Brown, and next to Mann, woman. This statement isn't so bad when you consider the environment in which his wit had to thrive. He has not decided upon his future occupation.

The stork wearied in its eastward flight, and dropped this fourteen-pound baby at Chicago in 1888. It proved to be a genius, and soon outgrowing his native environment, "Eddie" came to Brown, where his breezy Western manner has permeated the entire university. His chief occupations are sleeping on the window seat in 4 Slater and exercising on the piano in the Union smoking room. For diversion, he manages the vaudeville club, plays golf and jollies the girls. "Eddie" has many friends all over the United States, and, with these as capital, we believe that he will become a credit to the class in the profession of law.

In 1887 the gossips of Providence got busy, and spread the news that a truly aristocratic infant, with all the earmarks of a really "cultured" gentleman, had graced Providence with its presence. Realizing that you are likely to come into contact with some deucedly fine chaps at Brown, "Billy" joined his name with that of our university. "Bill" originated among the pines and sand dunes of Winslow, N. J., on November 26, 1884. That he had a hard row to hoe before he struck this celestial paradise is seen from the following list of preparatory schools, each of which tried in vain to satisfy his craving for knowledge: Rutgers College Preparatory School, Peddie Institute, Long Branch High School and Atlantic High School, where he at last graduated. During his college loaf he has been constantly holding down numerous class offices, wrecking laboratories and wrestling some poor unfortunate victim. In a short while he will wrestle with some form of chemical work.

EDMUND EVERETT MOFFETT

Born in '81, at Lincoln, R. I., and educated at the Central Falls High School, "Ed" decided upon Brown as a fit and proper finishing school. He put down the following college honors on his Senior LIBER slip: Chemistry 1, 2, 3; French 4; Math. 39, 40, and Mech. 1, which looks as if he had an enviable record. After his allotted time at Hope St. High he saw an opening in our financial syndicate, so entered the Herald office on the lowest rung. He has climbed the ladder of success until now he is "Don" Stone's chief accomplice. Loafing around has not been his strong point while amongst us, and the way he has been plying back and forth between the Union and Dr. Marvel's office is a caution. No wonder he deserves a "B" on his bonnet when he is able to give the University such an excellent football schedule, and at the same time keep our "Comedy of Errors" on its financial feet. "Goush" claims that he had nothing against Providence when he landed here in February, 1888. He decided, however, that to concentrate his mind on his studies he must leave all temptations behind him, so he drifted away to St. Mark's School. This Human Latch Key, as Bill Miller calls him, soon tired of working, so annexed himself to Brown. The study of man as a social being is his chief stock in trade, but he is finding out the intrinsic value of a manager's position on the side. Much of the success of the Junior Celebration can be traced to his inspiring genius. The class thanks him, and per chance the Dean does, too. He will put away his tennis racket, and get down to business after the class supper.

Allen was born August, 1888, in the outlying district of Little Compton, R. I. Home talent evidently did not suit him, for he studied abroad at the Fall River High School, making a specialty of the foreign languages that he found there. Who is that? Why, that's Guy Strickler,—you mean that handsome chappie who looks as if he might be an actor. He is a by-product of Lebanon, Penn., and Mercersburg Academy. Professor Crosby picked out Guy early in his Freshman year as a likely looking villain, so he has been holding down the villain's part in all our college melodramas. He has never got the hook, however. When his Sock and Buskin trials are over he will probably accept a position in some ten-twenty-thirty-cent theatre.

"Pip" was born on October 9, 1887, at Uniontown, Penn. For some unknown reason he seems to be proud of the fact that he hails from Pennsylvania. Taking a hop, skip and a jump from the Mt. Pleasant Institute, "Pip" landed in Providence, and began at once to read the sporting page of our local papers, and spring jokes that Methusaleh yawned at in his youthful days. "Pip" is one of our most popular classmates, and is usually sincere, except when leading cheers. Some day he will become a journalist.

JOHN JOSEPH SULLIVAN

Knightsville, R. I., and the year 1887 were responsible for "Sully." Since coming to Brown from the Cranston High School he has been distinguished from the common hoard by his omnipresent and impressive looking leather bag of books, and assiduity with which he studies the cinch courses run off by the Dealy, McDonald Co. As he only deigned to answer two of the questions on his Senior slip, we conclude that he has not many opinions on the burning questions of the day; or perhaps he only does not want to be "held responsible" for them.

See that car in the Slater garage? Well, that's Bobbie's. Is Bobbie a sport? No, Bobbie is not a sport. Is he too young to be a Senior? No, he is just the average age of his class, twenty-one. His youthful appearance is due to his good nature. Will the University give Bobbie a degree? No, Bobbie has earned his degree by sacrificing many golden hours to study with friends. Next year he will play hide and seek with the "bulls" and "bears" on the stock exchange.

"Pee Wee's" motto since the tender days of Prexie's handshake has been, "Lead handsome Harry and I will follow." Since that memorable day in 1886, when the Providence mothers gazed with delight upon this new-born social bud, Harold has worked havoc with all the debutante's hearts, from Hope St. High to Rhodes. "But those days are over," quoth "Pee Wee," and now he is in the act of purloining a B.S. degree that will set him adrift in the sea of fame in engineering.

This is George Francis "Bill" Sykes, the "whiskey tenor" of Brown's College. Yes, he certainly can hit the high places. Why, the report goes that he was born November 10, 1878, and three days afterwards the constable of Suffield, Conn., had him arrested and jailed for committing murder on the high C's. Isn't that going some? After he graduates he is going to enter his second childhood.

Harold started to talk so soon after he was born in October, 1887, that the neighbors in the immediate vicinity knew that this was no ordinary human being. He has enlivened many a class room with his discussions, and is an athlete, society man, —in fact, an all-round good fellow. Next year he will enter Harvard Law, and later brighten the legal profession with the scintillating rays of his genius.

Frank became interested in the world at Providence, December, 1885. The early part of his career was uneventful. He was a very good boy, and never caused the teachers of the Hope St. High School any trouble. He came to Brown with the firm intention of showing the professors that he was exceedingly bright in his studies. By making his intellect work overtime, he succeeded so well that he won a Phi Beta Kappa key before he realized the fact. In a short while he will give his brain a rest and go into business.

Selwyn Garfield Tinkham was born in 1880, on the night of Garfield's election, hence his name Garfield. After storing away a large supply of hot air at Powder Point School, in Duxbury, Mass., he took us by storm, and has been giving us much evidence of his ability to express his opinions in public places. His most intimate companion while in college has been his pipe. Next year he will lay out a couple of railroads in the wild, wooly West.

"Count" was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1884, but sought to obtain an identity of his own by leaving the "big city" and attending St. Lawrence University. From there he came to Brown in the fall of 1906, where he has been prominent in industrious circles. He expects to teach, and thinks that he will enjoy it. May the Fates send him to a co-educational school!

CHARLES HENRY WARD, 2d

"Charlie" astonished the inhabitants of Middletown, R. I., in the late eighties by grinning, when others of his size and age are wont to bawl. He has grinned his way into the hearts of his fellows ever since. A quiet individual in times of peace, but turn him loose in a class scrap, and "Oh my!" One more recruit will swell the ranks of the engineers when "Bottle" gets his degree in June.

CHARLES FLETCHER WARREN
K Σ

Charlie astounded his parents by solemnly pronouncing the word "formaldehyde" a few days after his birth in Plainville, Mass., in 1887. Curiosity as to the inner workings of the human body led him to Colby Academy and then to Brown, where he has been busily engaged in the biological or the chemical laboratory. Next year he will begin operations upon human beings instead of cats and bugs.

This noisy youth yelled lustily for the first time sometime in July, 1887, at Starksville, N. J. After growing like a weed, he came to Brown, where he has shown great class spirit, especially in rushes, in which he has sacrificed two hats to the cause. He was also one of the seventeen Sophomores who attended the Sophomore-Freshman football game. Post-graduate work will keep him busy for some time to come.

"Oh! see that nice-looking man running around the track with a B on his shirt. Ain't he just grand, Maggie! I wonder if he is wearing B. V. D.'s? looks like it, doesn't it, Maggie?" Johnny claims he learned how to run at Taft School and not at Kingston, R. I., where he was born in 1885. Be it as it may, for the past four years he has been eating up mile after mile on our cinder track with apparently unappeased appetite. If you don't think he can run take a look at his medals.

GEORGE FRANKLIN
WESTON, JR.

Keene, N. H., and August 26, 1886, were responsible for George. We are sure that George Franklin should have been baptized Benjamin Franklin, for even that great inventor had nothing on George when it came to being a wonder in science. In fact there is nothing that George doesn't know in that line, and we are sure that Brown would in future years be able to claim the distinction of producing another Edison, were it not for the fact that he is going to earn a precarious livelihood as a teacher.

Clarence Milton Whipple (long may his name survive!) first breathed into his manly lungs the autumnal fragrance of the village ozone in Mapleville, R. I., in September, 1886. Straight to his books went he, and by dint of hard labor induced the English Department to let him enter our academic lottery on trial. Although he spoiled his football career by hurting his leg in his Freshman year, he has made a ten strike on the bowling team. After he is educated he will be true to his Alma Mater, Brown.

As a star debater and high scholarship man he has made a mark upon the intellectual life of the college which will not soon be forgotten. But better than that, he has, with it all, found time to be the finest sort of a good fellow. Chauncey is one of the rare men who simply commands the respect of all who know them. He will spread the fame of Brown at Harvard Law School next year.

There are very few things that anyone has to show "Bob," even if he was born in Missouri. This handsome and modest youth entered Brown with the intention of building up his physique in the gymnasium on the quiet, but as soon as Dr. Marvel got a good look at him it was all off, and he was forced to become an artist's model for Freshmen and Sophomores. When tired of doing the push-ups, swinging Indian clubs and reading about Sandow, he has been working diligently on all kinds of committees. Next year he will write a pamphlet on "Exercise as a steady diet."

"Shank" happened at Allegheny in 1887. Moses Brown managed to hand him out enough condensed knowledge to carry him safely to our middle campus. Louis became a Brunonian to kill time and to carry notes for the Glee Club. If Brown had a whole faculty of Johnny Greenes he does not think Heaven would be in it for a minute. Musical Clubs (1) (2) (3) (4).

Norman first used his lungs for producing music on Feb. 16, 1886. He did not waste much breath in this way, however, for he learned to play the clarinet. After leaving regretfully behind him Peddie and its co-ed temptations, he added himself to our academic family, and has been blowing himself ever since. When not creating sweet, melodious Orphean music he has been responsible for countless disagreeable odors and broken retorts in the lab. He will manufacture pills and cough medicines in the near future, provided the pure food law does not become too stringent.

"Sid" is a mechanic, but not of the kitchen variety. Born in Providence in 1887, he attended the Hope St. High School, and came to Brown as a matter of course. When he completes the course in Civil Engineering he expects to do what few men really do after leaving college,—namely, work.

HENRY DRAPER WINSOR

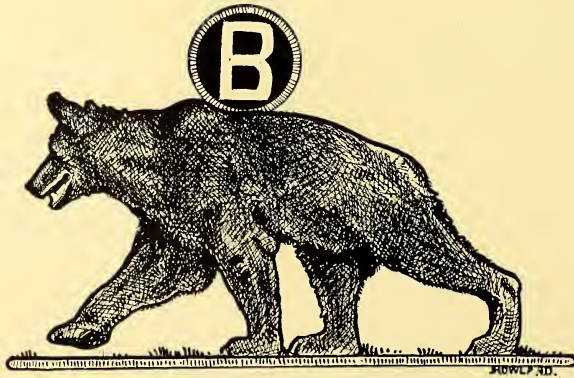

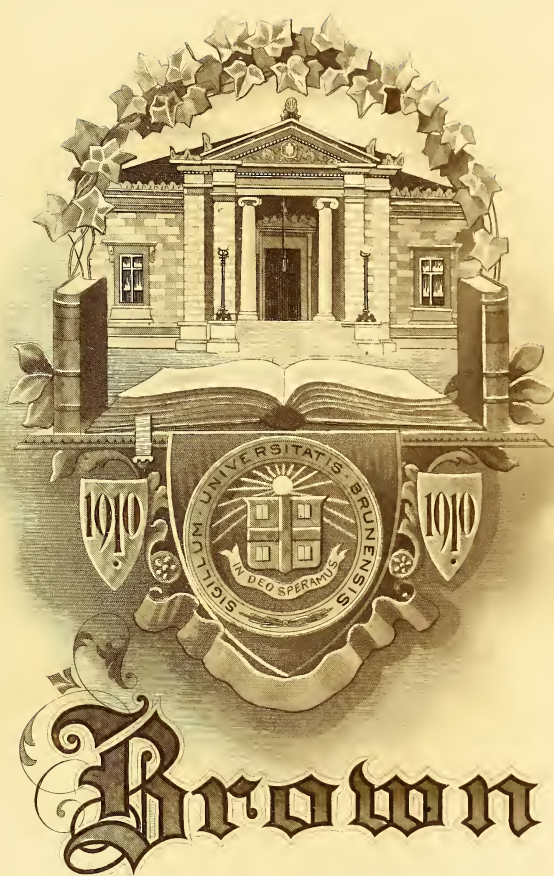

'Twas a hard-working breeze that wafted "Windy" one morning in 1886 to the town of Lincoln, R. I. West Roxbury High School oiled his thinking machinery, and four years with our lusty C. E. bunch have made him a most smooth running piece of mechanism. In later days he will startle the world in dam or bridge construction.

MARTIN HARRY YORGANJIAN

Martin was born in Harpoot, Turkey, August 30, 1885. Not liking the educational facilities of his own country, he crossed the pond and entered Brown. Not being content with completing the required amount of work in four years, he has cut his college loaf down to three years. He intends to have a full share in the evolution and consequent revolution of moral, political and, the most essential of all, economical world.

Prologue Effort

In this dear, old institution
Many classes have been famous
For the names of which they boasted—
For their great athletic warriors,
For the stern and steadfast students
Whom we think of as papooses,
For their histrionic artists,
For their sports and for their poets.
We have known them by tradition,
And have worshipped at their altars,
Thinking they had something on us;
But our wise men have determined,
After much deliberation,
That the men who wear among us
Nineteen Ten upon their sweaters,
Are as worthy and as famous.

Effort the First

There is Big Chief Malcolm Jeffris,
From the wild and woolly prairies,
Handsome, gentle and alluring,
Leader of the hot-air artists.
There is Pyle, our foremost Christian;
There is Mercer, very heady;
Next comes Comstock, who is stocky;
Hutchins follows, somewhat slender;
Richards, with his Dartmouth cover,

Sheds a radiance 'round about us ;
Taber scurries o'er the campus,
Hunting copy for the Herald;
Wilmarth, too, our fashion model ;
And there's Hibbs, the great magician.

Effort Another

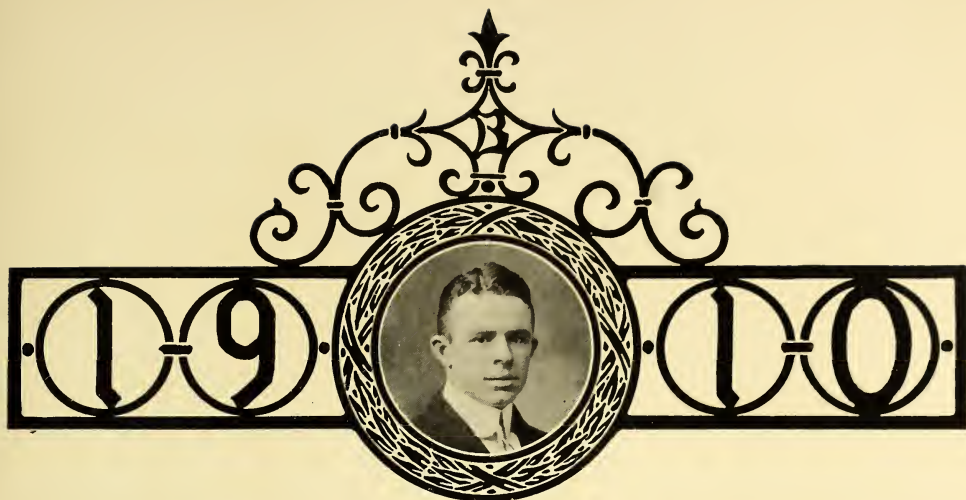

Athletes, too, abound among this
Class so strong and brave and famous—
Westervelt the bridge whist player,
Well known hero of the gridiron ;
Hartigan, the heap much runner,
Leader of the Nineteen Teners ;
Regnier, captain, captain, captain,
Very fetching in his manner ;
Carl Raquet, the tiny pigmy,
Small of voice and small of stature ;
Swaffield, very swift and cunning,
One of Brown's best known officials ;
Greene, who prances on the cinders ;
Hennessey, the mighty swatter ;
Mansur, Walker, Bliss, O'Connor,
All are known, and all are famous.

Effort the Last

Henderson, the wild, weird weeper,
Is a poet of first water ;
Howland, too, a perfect lady ;
Carpenter, a wondrous thinker ;
Gannon, our great social leader,
Quite a cunning little dresser ;
Ham, who's there on all occasions ;
Lynn, Saint George among the ladies ;
Allen, born a business leader ;
Kent and Walcott, hockey players ;
Seybolt, rah, rah, rah for Seybolt ;
Paddock, who was once a juggler.
Have you ever seen a class roll
Half so great or half so famous ?
Ki-Yi for the Nineteen Teners,
Three long Browns, and hide your laughter !

Eloquence

A SCORE or less of 1911 men are met together in Room P of the Union. The classic walls of the room are outlined between the floor and the ceiling. The pendulum of the clock is swinging back and forth with rhythmic exactness, doling out time in scanty portions. It is a class meeting. Serious business is vexing the minds of the Sophomores. But wait. The day is saved. High rises to his hands and feet, and with eloquent outbursts awakes the wild echoes from the distant walls. The meeting adjourns immediately.

Modesty

HILL, with a complacent, self-satisfied expression, is shooting baskets in basketball practice. "There! can you beat that? Never touched the rim. Guess I am good. I don't see why I am not on the basketball team."

Transcendent Genius

THE class room, gasping for breath, groans mournfully as Bennett takes the floor, and starting in with "I think, I think," gradually accelerates his verbal pace until he soars into regions unknown to the finite mind.

Lost

As in a forest primeval the thick underbrush does hide and blind the untrodden paths, and men, losing their sense of direction, wander aimlessly around in the deceptive vegetation, even so does Wallace walk to and fro on the asphalt carpets of our University campus.

Brotherly Love

HE hurried down the Union steps. His feet scarcely touched the pavement. His necktie was of a brilliant hue. A worried but intelligent expression hovered over his countenance. He must find his brother. Yes, it was Charles Sisson.

Inviting

DISTANT voices are heard. "Say, kiddo, will you go for a walk? Look at the moon! Isn't it grand? All right, I will get a canoe." The voice belonged to Kindelan.

Manliness

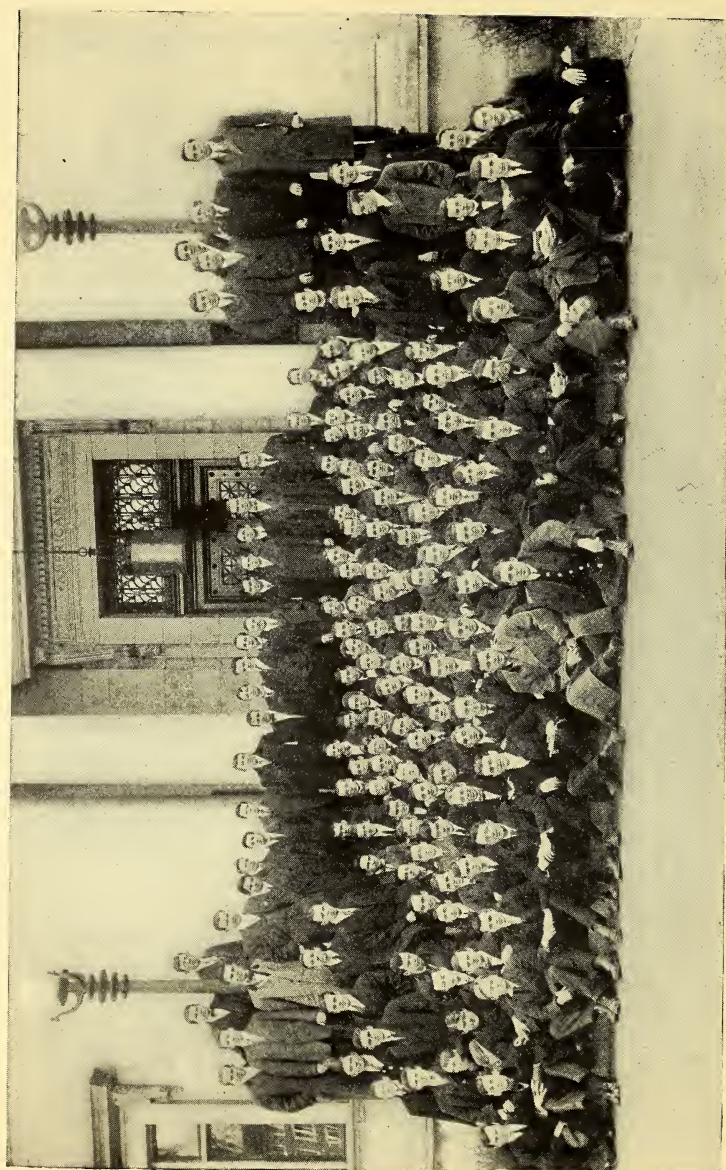

THE sun was slowly slipping down out of sight, and was shining as brightly as an automobile lamp. Brenton Smith's head and shoulders were silhouetted against the fence on Andrews field. What a picture for the photographer if he had been on the spot. But he wasn't.

Rampage

'TIS a basketball game. The battle is going hard. The conflict is fierce. The players are exerting every muscle. McKay strikes his palms together gently, and in a semi-audible whisper invokes his team mates to do their best with the words "Come on Brown, come on Brown."

Expectancy

SOCIETY was in an uproar. Was it possible that he was not coming? Had he forgotten that the dinner party was to be held that evening? The suspense was awful. The oysters were growing warmer, and were getting clammy. Minutes fled. Suddenly the door opened, and Howe flew into the room. The dinner proceeded.

T. W. WRIGHT, BALD

On the Outside Looking In

TIME: Last day of Freshman Enrolment.

PERSONS: Principal members of the Freshman Class, President Faunce and the Dean.

MARBLE (in a stage whisper): I am very pleased to meet you, Mr. Aspinwall, and you, too, Mr. Keresey. My name is Marble. We look like 'Varsity material, don't we?

KERESEY: Decidedly. I just love to make teams.

ASPINWALL: If it is physique that makes a team I guess I ring in.

KEPPEL: My, but I am brave. I helped put out posters the other night. Do you think "Prexy" Faunce approves of posters?

MILLER (overhearing the conversation): Say, can you fellows tell me why they call President Faunce "Prexy?" Is that his first name?

WINTERICH (in a monotone): Prex; genitive, precis. Feminine gender, meaning prayer, request, entreaty.

MUNRO (just arriving in the hall): Excuse me for living, but some one told me that the Herald office was on the campus. Is it around here?

CHACE: Ki Yi for me. I can tell you. Go down into the cellar of the Union and knock at all the doors you come to.

LARKIN (who has met Hennessy coming up from Westerly on the train): Well, Brooklyn must be quite a hamlet from your description of it, but give me Westerly every time for a quiet lark.

HENNESSY: Gee, but you ought to see the goils from my joint. They all go to the baseball games there, and I used to play baseball on my school team.

LARKIN: Henceforth call me "Dan." I want to become acquainted with all the shining lights of my class.

HENNESSY: If you are making fun of my hair I will get my big brother after you.

MUMFORD (glancing around with a demure look): Can any of you fellows tell me if Brown possesses a natatorium?

ELMS (with a surprised but interested expression): Golly girls! what is the row? My world for a dictionary. I suppose that word is fair enough, but is by me. Sure, I know where it is. It is on the second floor of the Union over the Trophy room.

NEWELL (with a convincing oratorical outburst): I was quite a debater at my "Prep" school. Last fall I was kept off the team on account of spraining my thumb in one of the trials.

KENDALL (with a patronizing air to the Dean who happens to be passing): Say, Freshman, can you tell me where I can find a man called Theron Clark? They tell me that the campus is for sale. Would you advise me to get a ninety-nine year lease or buy it outright?

THE DEAN: Yes, yes, I see, I see. I will do all I can for you, but I am sorry I cannot advise you.

SPRACKLING (to Andrews): You may not believe it, but I am terribly cute. Will you take me down to Rhodes and introduce me to some of your friends?

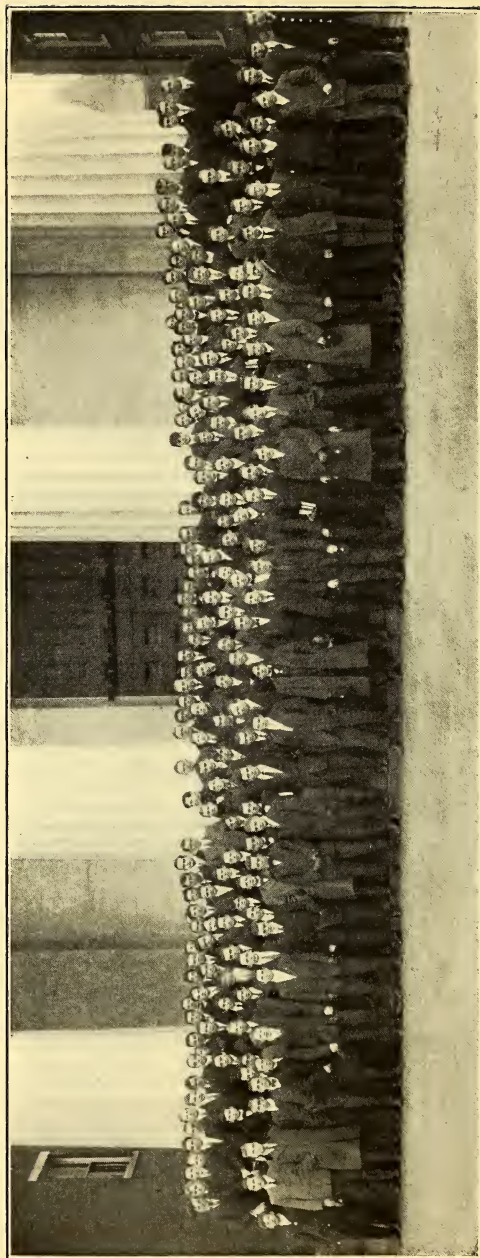

ANDREWS: Not on your life. Want me to lose my social standing around this berg? I tell you what I will do, though. I am a true sport. Let's go down and rush Himmel at Keith's.

MILES (as if repeating a memorized speech): I am very much interested in track athletics. You see I did quite a little running at Worcester Academy. I certainly had good luck in winning so many races, if you can call it luck.

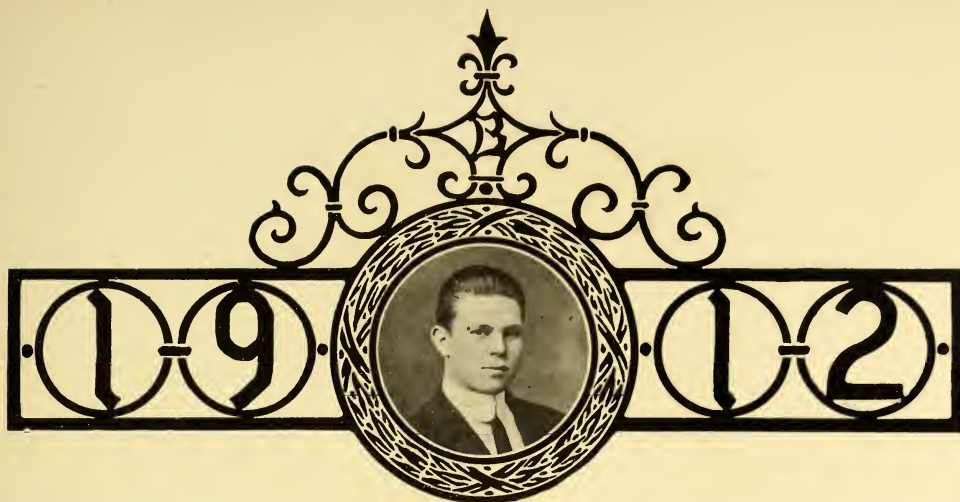

MAHONEY: You must be good. Say, old man, will you coach me this year? I haven't done much running, but I am willing to learn from a good man.

PRESIDENT FAUNCE (appearing on the scene in full uniform): Ah! I am glad to see you all. Brown swings wide her open doors to her new recruits. Let us steadily, sturdily press onward. This is no place for the shirker, the dawdler, or the man who has to be carried on other men's shoulders. Your best investment will be the hours you put into serious work. Yas, Yas, I welcome you in behalf of the University.

(The Freshmen look duly impressed, and the President leaves for less verdant fields. After a long, nervous waiting, with plenty of system and red tape thrown in on the side, the gauntlet is safely passed, and our above mentioned Freshman friends become registered in this educational institution.)

In Memoriam

JOHN SEYMOUR SWEETLAND

ELIOT LOOMIS COLLINS

1910

College days are like the sea—

A summer calm may seem as long,
Safe behind the harbor bars—
Or the pause within a song.
We, the little jolly boats,
Sailing out to open main.
Come again, O Graduate,
Come and sail with us again.

Come again, come again, to the port of your clearing,
Bearing scars of battle, and the joy of distant seas;
Come again, come again, joyously steering,
Tribute and honor bearing, bearing,
Borne by the might of memory's breeze.

College days are like the sea—

Short the time from start to close—
Quiet, land-lull'd summer sea;
Meet we other? No one knows.
Out beyond the harbor's rest,
Storms may come and shake the main.
Joy we here! O Graduate,
Come you back to port again.

Come again, come again, from the gates of the morning,
On the jolly home trail once again, hull down;
From the end of the day or the shores of its dawning;
Once again sailing, sailing, sailing,
Back to the memories hailing, hailing,
Back to the port of old Brown.

Football Season of 1908

THE Brown University football eleven made the season of 1908 memorable by tying Yale 10-10 and holding Harvard, intercollegiate football champion of the season, to a 6-2 score. The team which did such remarkable work on two successive Saturdays was composed of four Seniors, two Juniors, two Sophomores, and three Freshmen; and of these eleven six had never won their "B." To Coach Gammons belongs the lion's share of the praise in developing and turning out such a team, which made a name for itself and reflected great credit upon its Alma Mater. From the time of the Penn. game until the climax was reached in the Yale game, the Brown team, individually and collectively, showed the effects of excellent coaching, and improved surely and steadily in their work. Praise should also be bestowed upon the staff of assistant coaches, especially to Conklin, Smith, Westervelt, and AYLER, 'Varsity material kept out of the game by various reasons, who labored hard and faithfully. With such a team, the lack of the Dartmouth game was more to be regretted than it was last year. Captain Mayhew and Dennie were awarded positions upon the second All-American eleven, honors which were certainly well won and well deserved. The shoes of these stars next season will indeed be hard to fill.

The season started with the usual problems and uncertainties, chief of which was the lack of material, due largely to the fact that so many men of 'Varsity material were ineligible. Preliminary practice was held on the farm of Coach Gammons at New Bedford, Mass. Every possible thing was done for the squad, and the days spent on the farm proved most beneficial to all the men. It was here that Coach Gammons began instilling into each man the importance of grasping the first essentials of the game. The first game of the season was at Andrews Field, with New Hampshire State, September 26. Brown won handily 34-0. On the following Wednesday Bates was trimmed 34-4. At the end of October the strong Colgate eleven proved a worthy five, and Brown was exceedingly lucky in pulling out a 6-0 victory, the touchdown coming in the first few minutes of play on a pretty trick formation. The Colgate team was held for downs within a foot of the Brown goal line. Bowdoin was the next opponent, and the Brunonians did not show to advantage in a 12-0 victory.

The week preceding the Penn. game was a siege of hard work, and Coach Gammons and his assistants worked hard to bring the men into fighting trim. Accompanied by the largest bunch of rooters ever sent to Philadelphia in years, the team went on the field determined to chase away the hoodoo which had pursued Brown elevens on Franklin Field for the past four years. But Brown elected to receive the kick-off, and the costly fumble was again in evidence, and, in two plays, a speedy touchdown for Penn. resulted and took the hearts out of the hopeful wearers of the Brown and White. "Spike" Dennie was injured early in the game, and had to be carried off the field. At the end of the first half the score stood 12-0, with the Penn. team playing magnificent football, Hollenback and Maniear ripping up the Brown line at will, and things looked black indeed. But the game fight put up by the losers in the second half, in which they kept Penn. from scoring and three times took the ball from their opponents in the very shadow of the goal, is worthy of the highest praise, and showed the mettle of the men, seven of whom had never been in a big game before, how a few weeks later were to play the Yale team off its feet.

Following the Penn. game Lafayette appeared on Andrews Field and, with the aid of McCaa's drop kicking ability, defeated Brown 8-6. One of McCaa's goals was from the 43 yard line. The outlook for the Harvard game was dark, but no stone was left unturned in the way of preparation. The Celebration Committee arranged for three mass-meetings, and the spirit worked up until one of the largest delegations ever sent to Cambridge was secured. The game was a great battle, witnessed by over 20,000 people, neither side scoring in the first half. Harvard secured her touchdown in the second half, while Brown made a safety, the first ever seen in the Harvard Stadium.

It was on the seventh of November that the Brown eleven won a high niche in the football world, when, at New Haven, they tied the Yale team 10-10 and virtually won the game. The memory of that day is still fresh in the minds of all Brown men, and those who were fortunate enough to see the game will never forget it. It is needless to recall the incidents of the great contest and the many "if's" which kept Brown from winning the game. Does it not seem strange that the only goal from the field that "Ted" Coy ever kicked should be made on that day and save Yale from defeat? Every man on the Brown team played football of the sensational order, and even the mighty Coy was powerless before the sturdy Brunonians. It was "Spike" Dennie who gets the credit for twice crossing the Eli's goal line; the first time by a beautiful forward pass, and the second by the interception of a forward pass and dashing thirty-five yards through the entire Yale team.

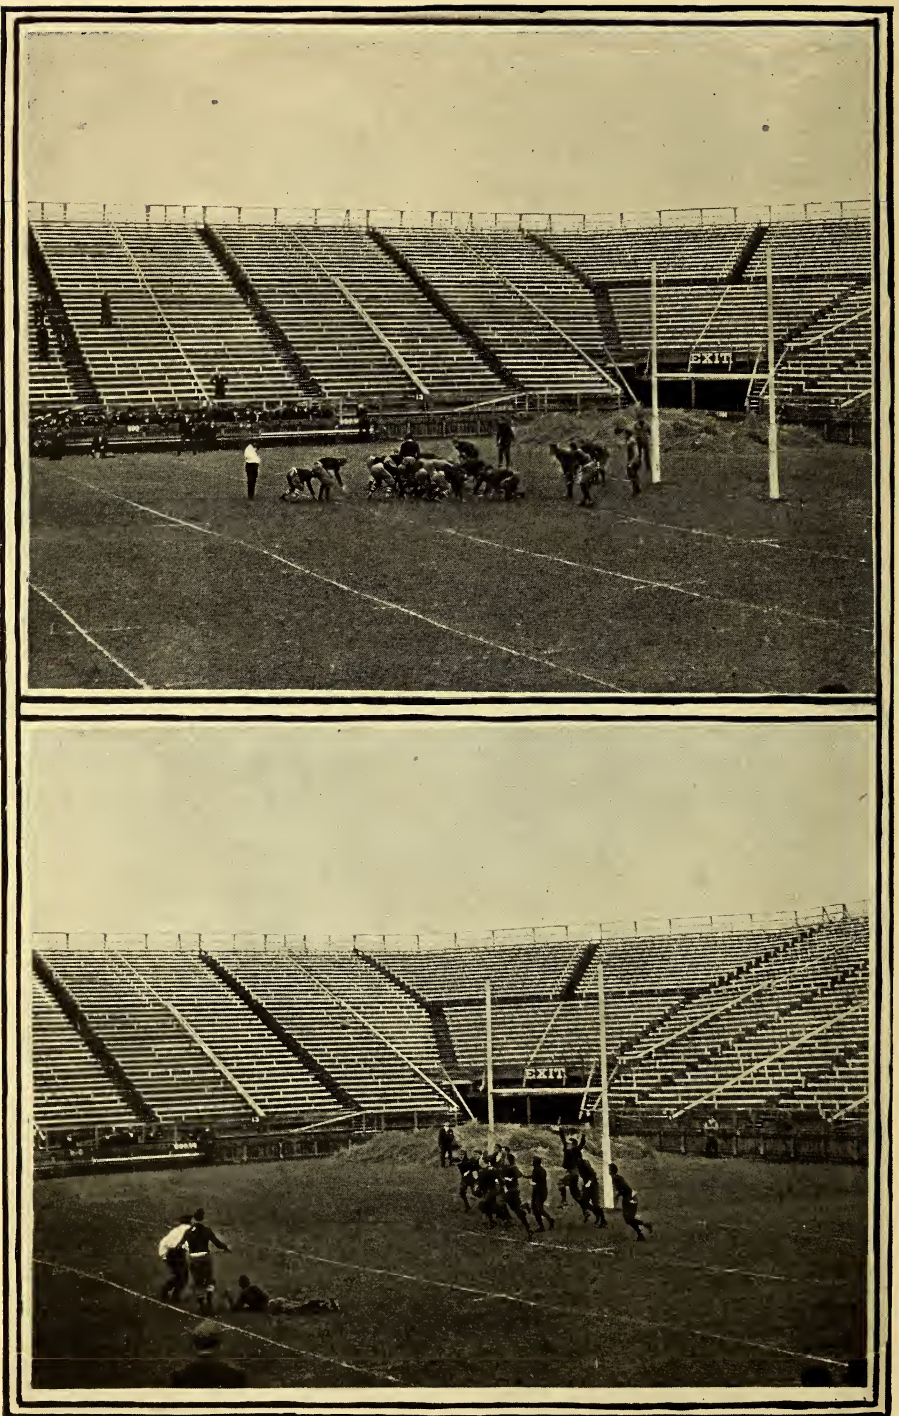

The prospects for next year seem good, as the team loses but three regulars by graduation. The schedule includes games with Amherst, Penn., Harvard, Yale, and the Carlisle Indians, and although it is a very hard one, it affords great possibilities for the wearers of the Brown and White.

Baseball Season of 1908

At the beginning of the 1907-1908 college year the baseball outlook was fairly bright. Only three men of the '07 championship team were available and the one-year rule was in effect, but there were many good ball-players in the University. The management worked hard to keep these men eligible, realizing that good ball-players are never any too plenty. Yet despite these efforts, when the spring term opened and the first game was only a few days off, we found pitchers, infielders and outfielders, who had showed up very well in cage-practice, hopelessly ineligible, or at least debarred until the make-up examinations occurred.

The first four games we would have won if we had been able to use the men that played later. They were all close games and a little better fielder here or a better batsman there would have turned the tide. Four victories as a start would have made all the difference in the world, for there is nothing so encouraging as a good beginning either in a game of baseball or in a season. But the fact remains that we lost those four games, and we lost them because we were the poorer team in each contest. One by one candidates passed off their work, and by the Wesleyan game we must have begun to look something like a ball nine. The able coaching of Dr. Frank J. Sexton began to bear fruit, and by the Yale game in Providence we thought we were going along nicely and expected to win. But it was not to be, and for the first time in some years Brown went down to defeat on her own field before Yale. It was the greatest disappointment of the year.

I shall mention here only a few of the games in which we proved more successful. From a Brown standpoint, the Michigan game was the best of the season. Brown was the only team this western college was to meet in the east, and the eyes of the college world were upon us. The masterly pitching of Nourse and the steady play of the entire team won 5-3 for Brown. The Harvard game in Providence was no less interesting and encouraging, ending as it did 3-1 for Brown. But perhaps the most exciting and spectacular game of all was witnessed by few Brown men. In this game at West Point the team played one of the best games a Brown team ever put up. Sensational fielding, daring base-running, and timely hitting abounded. After 14 innings of strenuous baseball, Brown came off victor 4-2. Thus one might go on explaining a defeat here, and telling how this or that game was won, but it is all over, and perhaps the less said about a poor season the better. A poor season we must call it, for a baseball team that wins only 10 out of 21 games, no matter what the reasons were, can hardly expect to be called successful here at Brown, where we are in the habit of winning regularly from the best of them.

Anybody but a Brown man with the Brown spirit that Dr. Sexton has would have felt like quitting his task. But he fought it out gamely with us, and how well he did you all know. By the middle of the season, when he had fair material to work on, one could see the steady improvement in the team from day to day. By the end of the season, had we pitchers to relieve Nourse, we would have compared favorably with most Brown teams. Dr. Sexton knows more baseball than any man I ever knew and, better still, knows how to teach it. As a college baseball coach I believe he is unequalled. We owe much to "Mike" Lynch for his unselfish interest in the team. Many days during the season he left his work to spend the afternoon with us on Andrews Field. His advice and encouragement were very helpful.

CAPTAIN RAYMOND

The spirit and gameness shown by "Chet" Nourse are surely worthy of mention here. Less than six months before the opening of the season he was lying critically ill with typhoid fever in a southern hospital. He returned to college about the middle of the fall term far from a well man. He made up his work, and when the first game arrived was ready with the rest of us to do his best. He had not regained his full strength and was in no condition to do himself justice. Yet without a murmur of complaint he did practically all the pitching. No one but a ball-player who has been through it all knows how trying it is to have to play ball, particularly to pitch, when not in the best of condition. The arm has lost its power and cunning; one realizes this and it gets on his nerves. Yet out of condition and overworked as he was, Nourse pitched some fine ball and his record proves that he is as good as most college pitchers of the year. In condition I believe he has no superior on the college diamond.

There are one or two things we may learn from our rather unfortunate baseball season of 1908. In the first place it is clear that no man who is ineligible should be allowed to participate in winter cage-practice unless he is practically certain of making up his work before the opening of the season. It is a waste of time for a coach to spend hours on men whom he will not be able to use. Again, last year showed conclusively what effect faculty disqualification can have on a team. Personally I think the rules a little severe, but they exist, and every man knows, or ought to know, what they are and what he must do if he expects to play on Brown teams. Our problem, then, is to keep our athletes up in their work, and the question arises—are we doing our very best in this respect? It is quite a task for the two managers of the baseball team, for instance, to begin each year and "keep track" of all ball-players in college. The Eligibility Committee was appointed by the Cammarian Club for the purpose of rendering the management of our various teams the help they need in this line—and they surely have a chance to do some really good work. But every man in college can help Brown teams to win games. A fraternity man can see to it that every athlete in his "crowd" keeps eligible. One who is not a fraternity man can also find a chance to help. Look around and find some athlete who is likely to "make good," or who has already; encourage him to keep eligible and help him to do so in some way or other. If you are an athlete, do your best to keep eligible; do your best to escape the regret a man must feel who could have made a team but is not allowed to play because through carelessness he has fallen behind in his work.

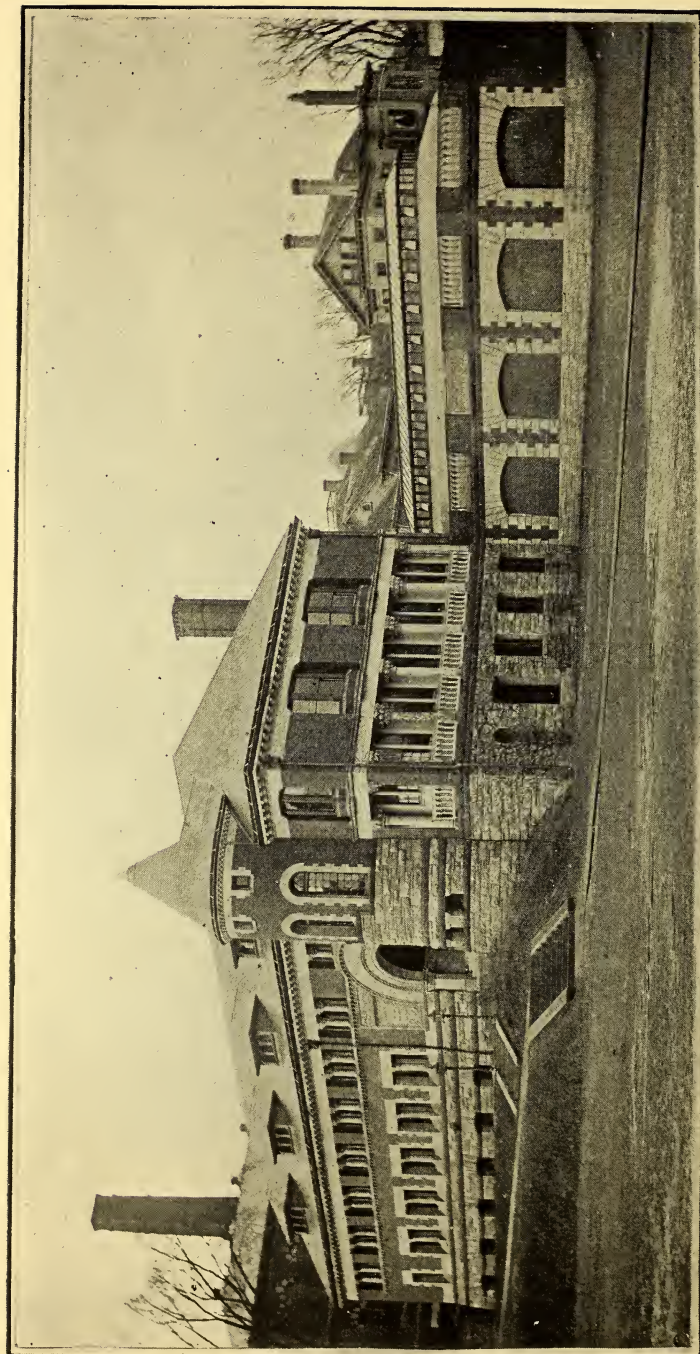

W. P. RAYMOND,

Captain for the season of 1908.

Track Season of 1908

THE track season of 1907-08, although not as successful as that of previous years, was a creditable one, in view of the obstacles which the team encountered during the entire year. In the first place, comparatively few men reported for the team, and in the second place, those few men, without exception, suffered from strains and bruises almost continuously.

The relay team, composed of Captain Honiss, Mayhew, Hartigan, and Young, was almost the equal of the championship quartette of the previous year. The race with Amherst at Boston, on February 1, was lost only after a heartbreaking race and a close decision, in the fast time of 3 minutes 12 4-5 seconds. The running of Young was a feature of the race. At the Troy Y. M. C. A. Meet the team reached its best form and simply romped away from Williams in the fair time of 3 minutes 34 seconds for the full mile. These two races constituted the winter season, which was very short, due to the lack of financial support.

On May 2 Brown surprised many by defeating Williams on Weston Field in a dual meet by the score of 64 to 62. Brown was strong in the sprints, hurdles and weight events, while the individual work of Mayhew and Hartigan won the day. The former made 18 1-2 points, winning both hurdles and the broad jump and securing places in the hundred-yard dash and pole vault. The latter won the 100 and 220 dashes while suffering from a severe case of "charlie-horse."

A week later Brown lost to Technology on Technology Field by the score of 71 1-2 to 54 1-2 points. Brown's weakness was in lack of second and third place winners. Again Mayhew and Hartigan showed up prominently. Mayhew captured both hurdles and the broad jump, and Hartigan won both of the short dashes.

The team showed unsuspected weakness in the New England Intercollegiate Meet, held on Technology Field May 22 and 23. Every one of Brown's runners was in rather poor condition, owing to sprains and unfavorable spring weather. Coach McGrath worked hard and conscientiously all season to get more men in shape, and his work is to be commended. Dartmouth won first place with 49 points, and Brown was seventh with 10 points, these being won by Mayhew, Kirley and Greene. Mayhew got fourth place in both hurdles and second place in the broad jump; Kirley took second place in the discus throw, and Greene secured third place in the mile event. In the Intercollegiate Meet in Philadelphia, Brown was represented by Mayhew, but he failed to qualify.

Basketball Season of 1909

CAPTAIN REGNIER

THE basketball season opened in the same discouraging way that has marked past seasons. Several men were debarred, owing to failures in the examinations, and, in one case, a valuable man was lost because of one entrance condition, even though his work during the term was very satisfactory. With this handicap the team faced one of the best, but at the same time hardest, schedules that could be arranged. The first three games were played and lost before the special examinations. Judging by comparative scores these games would have resulted in victories but for the team's crippled condition. With the return of the players who had been disqualified, the team showed a decided improvement, and in the next few games Harvard, Yale and Syracuse were easily defeated. Of the next seven games four were played on the road. All four were lost. This, however, is not remarkable, considering the handicap which must be overcome in playing on an opponent's court. The three last games played on the home court resulted in two victories and one defeat. The work of the team during the season was very erratic in shooting, but the passing and general floor work was very good, and resulted in an increased number of chances for the basket. This can be attributed directly to the coaching and influence of "Don" Pryor. The present indications point to a very successful season for 1910, as every member of this year's 'Varsity will return, and there will be, in addition, the material from the Freshman class.

A. E. REGNIER,

Captain for the season of 1909.

The First Snow Fall

Fluffy little snowflakes,
Flitting through the air,
Wondering, I watched them
Nestle in her hair.

One wee thing was bolder,
Lightly touched her cheek,
Thoughts ran rife within me
That I dare not speak.

Heart was filled with envy,
Heaved a heavy sigh,
Then she, glancing upward,
Caught my jealous eye.

Witchingly, she dimpled ;
I grew over bold,—
Acted like the snowflake,
Only not as cold.

A Toast

A toast to quick-passed years just come and fled,
To all that they have brought, or taken too ;
The time when hopeful manhood's prayer is said,
An age, a day has passed ? We never knew.
Four years of work you say, of work and bliss ?
But we who spent them know 'twas more than this.

A toast to all the fights we've fought and won,
The quiet midnights used in lieu of day ;
The call to work that conquered youth-loved fun,
And knowledge, good or bad, we take away.
Just cold, hard facts, you say, learned hit or miss ?
But we who learned them know 'twas more than this.

A toast to merry nights which 'round us whirled,
Good fellowship that others never knew,
Too indiscreet, perhaps, for a sober world,
For we like all the world were human too.
Bohemian dream, you say, a Circe's kiss ?
But we who dreamed it know 'twas more than this.

A health to all the men we came to know,
Good fellows, foolish where few men are wise,
But wise where stern demand would have it so,
And rich in comradeship that never dies.
A group of boys, you say, who hit or miss ?
But we who knew them know 'twas more than this.

A toast and love to foster mother, Brown,
The halo of tradition that she wears,
Affection by her children handed down,
And all the weight of dignity she bears.
Mock sentiment, you say, an empty kiss ?
But we who felt it know 'twas more than this.

The quick-passed years we'll smile to recollect,
What we have learned brings fruit where seed was sown ;
Those men life's truest friendship will reflect.
Old day dreams stay when dreaming days are flown,
And sons may come Brunonia's shrine to kiss,
To us who know, can aught mean more than this ?

Götterdaemerung

The great playhouse was crowded upon that winter night—a famous drama had been billed, its name was "Lit and Light." The names upon the program were known from sea to sea: George Carpenter was the villain, the hero Larrabee, Henderson leading juvenile, Selleck the hero's pal, Littlefield the heroine and Murphy, a friend named Sal.

The curtain rose, the house was hushed, nobody breathed at all, the scene was in an office in Rockefeller Hall, with magazines upon the desks, and copy on the floor, a college Lit on which to spit, Poe's picture on the door. The hero sat there writing, a frown sat on his brow, his tie was tied correctly, but his hair was mussed somehow. Once in a while he muttered; he surely was perplexed, and the fiery glint of his eyes of flint showed he was also vexed. "My editorship for a short story and a book review as well, this verse and these worn-out essays I know will never sell. Ah, here comes dear Brown Study, whose almost human mind will offer a solution, and a way out I will find." In strode his bosom comrade with a collar meant to choke, and sitting down he proudly asked our hero for a smoke.

"You want some stories that are good, a book review or two?" He looked around, and looked perplexed, for he was puzzled too.

"There's Swinburne Kipling Henderson, but he's overyoung, you know, and his prose is overburdened with slushy poetic woe. But what's the matter with Carpenter to do the book review? He's young and pure and bright, I'm sure; we must let the tales go to."

"A good idea; I'll follow it; I'll look up George to-night. We must dis sever the Brunonian forever from everything that's light."

Just then young Swinburne entered, his face was all aglow; a halo glistened 'round his head, from his mouth sweet words did flow.

"Ah, hearken to my poetry, I have a new one here—its title is 'A Windy Night Upon the Ocean Drear.'"

And then he took a hero's stand, his eyes exuded bliss. He waved his hand for silence, then recited to them this:—

"O Muse, amuse me while I muse,
O mortals have some pity,
O ocean listen while I sing
To you my tender ditty.
Oh, sob ye winds! oh, hark my woe!
O breeze, caress my face;
I thought I held a royal flush,
But I found I lacked the ace."

Just then the villain entered; his face was dark with wrath. "Ah me," sighed he. "She turned me down; the girl who crossed my path."

And then he heard young Swinburne; his face grew angry red, and pulling out a bloody knife he struck the poet dead. Then Sallie ran in breathless; she saw him lying there; she gave a shriek, her eyes did leak, she pulled her pretty hair. The villain smiled with fiendish glee, those present thus harangued, "A man who writes such poetry should not be stabbed but hanged. And here, my friend, I've written up your wanted book review about 'The Church in Italy, or What Religion Should Do.'"

He smiled, he laughed, then murmured, as he wiped the bloody knife, "I write such stuff, then kill a man—aha, a double life."

Our hero cried, "You criminal, you must die for these awful wrongs. You've killed my friend, and now I'll send your soul where it belongs."

He rushed upon him quickly, and threw him to the floor, and pressed his fingers 'round his throat until his hands were sore. "No use," he cried, then grabbed the knife, in George's bosom stuck it. George gave a most unholy yell, fell back, and kicked the bucket.

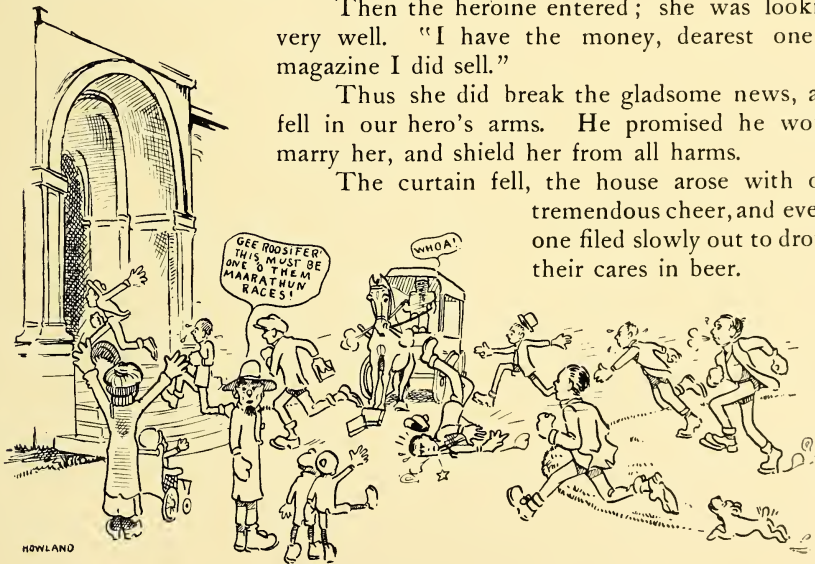

Then Larry rose, and wiped his brow, "A noble deed," he said. But loud he cried, when there he spied young Swinburne lying dead.

"Where will I find the money to bury my dear friend. The magazine has not a cent, and I have none to spend."

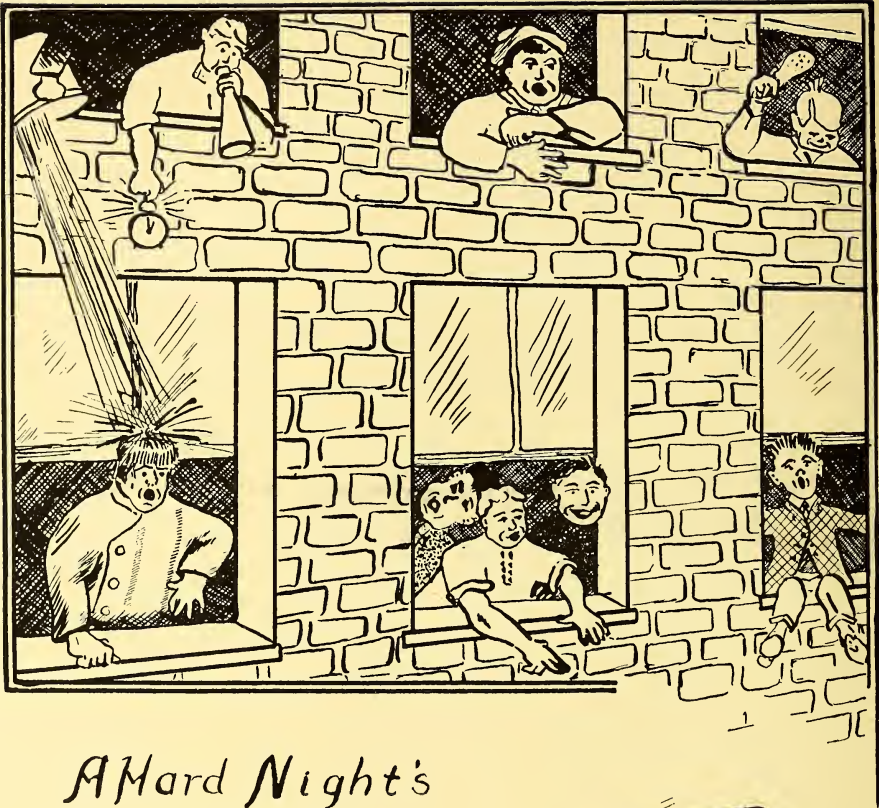

Then the heroine entered; she was looking very well. "I have the money, dearest one, a magazine I did sell."

Thus she did break the gladsome news, and fell in our hero's arms. He promised he would marry her, and shield her from all harms.

The curtain fell, the house arose with one tremendous cheer, and everyone filed slowly out to drown their cares in beer.

What Would the Herald Do Without the Freshmen?

We the undersigned, chief reporters for the Brown Daily Herald, do hereby respectfully call the condescending attention of the revered and much feared managing editor of this important sheet to the necessity and importance of bringing the Freshman competition to a decent and timely end by the first day of May, for the good of our own souls and bodies as well as for that of our contemporaries in the Sophomore class.

We find that the excessive work which we are now doing is not only prejudicial to the health of our minds and bodies, but it exercises a most disastrous effect on our college standings.

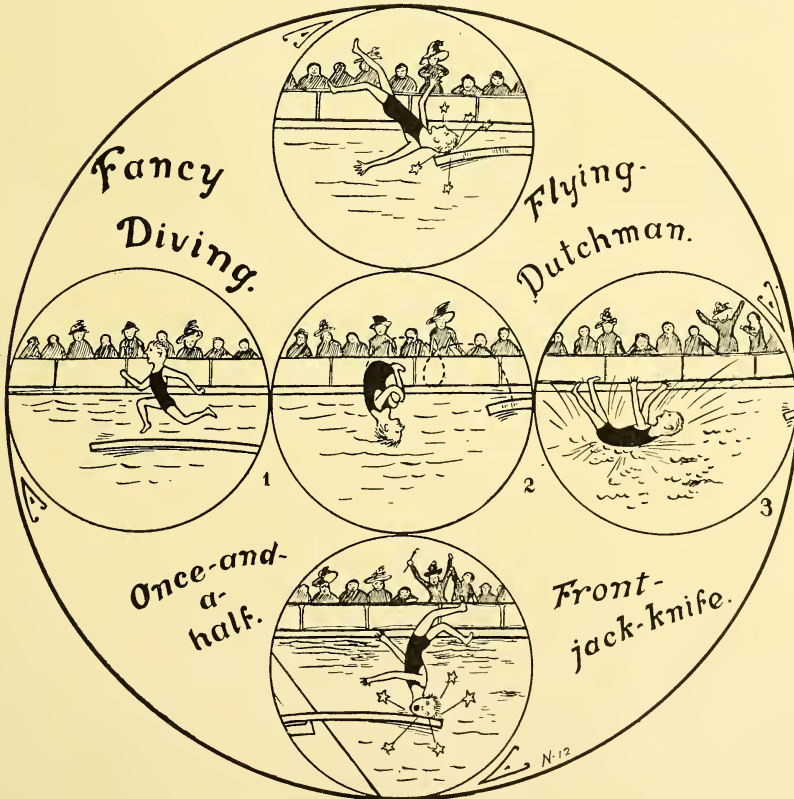

Moreover the members of the Sophomore competition would be much benefited by a chance to secure a little news occasionally, and would take a more healthy interest in the paper if they could do so. We believe that the Sophomore members of the Board would also be benefited by a chance to work, as they are at present bringing little credit to the Herald or to themselves, being idle and useless. Indeed, we have even seen one of these looking at young ladies on the campus, and have sincerely felt that it was time to put him to work in the competition for athletic editor. Moreover, when our present Sport graces the office no more, what will the paper do for someone to write up sage athletic opinions?

The Sophomores could easily, with our advice and encouragement, and with the assistance of the Junior competitor (!) supply the paper with news.

Respectfully calling attention to these facts, we set our names to this communication on this 9th day of March, 1909:—

DANA G. MUNRO,
W. RANDOLPH BURGESS,
DANIEL L. BROWN,
R. C. DEXTER,

Freshman Competition.

HOCKEY THROWN ON THE SCREEN AGAIN

When a dainty, little maiden from the other side of town
Trips across the dear old campus of our likewise dear old Brown ;
When she waves her snowy kerchief, gently nods her pretty head
With a calculated gracefulness that cannot be gainsaid ;
When she says, " Well, are you going? " WHY, YOU GO.

When a couple hours later, at her home, you hold her hand,
Vowing that you love her better than you love your native land ;
When at twelve o'clock you hear a husky male voice sharply say,
" Mamie, kindly tell that college boy to beat it right away " ;
When she says, " Yes, pa, he's going, " WHY, YOU GO.

Village News

The Symphony Orchestra will hold a dance and husking bee in Room P of the Union for its own benefit. An augmented orchestra will furnish the music.

Mr. George Washington Greene Carpenter will deliver a lecture in the near future, entitled, "Professor Munro as a Short Story Teller," in the Grange Hall in the rear of Brunonia Hall.

The horse races which were to have taken place on Lincoln Field last fall at the village fair were called off by Charles Hughes of our Aesthetic Board. The betting at that time was strongly in favor of Lou Dillon Sturgis, our fast trotter.

Keith Mercer, one of our youngest but ablest talkers, will coach our debating teams for the coming season. Keith is also exchange editor of the Village Scrap Book.

"Turpentine as a Paint," by Moses Crossley, author of "Alcohol as a Food." For sale at all newstands.—Adv.

Robert W. Whitmarsh, known to hundreds of his friends as "Bob," announces that Wednesday is Ladies' Day in the Gymnasium.

The trees on our front lawn are being sprayed to keep off the bugs. Raquet is being used as the spraying tower.

Robert C. Murphy, of Rhode Island Hall, is on the verge of editing a book called Rough on Cats. This suggestive pamphlet will furnish graphic description of what happens to the cats used in Comparative Anatomy from the time they leave the professor's back yard until they are served as chicken croquettes at the Union Dining Room and Refectory.

Harry Smith, one of our fashion plates, will introduce a brand new bonnet in front of chapel next Saturday morning. All students not having to pass directly to their classes are urged to be present. Free samples will be distributed.

Guy Strickler recently suffered a severe attack of St. Vitus Dance from swallowing a large, luscious wad of chewing gum. The physicians assert that he will recover.

Miss Henrietta Chafee recently announced her engagement to Mr. Harper Goodspeed, of Chicago, at an informal afternoon tea given in 7 Slater Hall. Miss Chafee is a charming and vivacious brunette, and has a decidedly winning way about her.

A. B. Comstock, one of our buxom laddies, has just given the Outlet Co. an order for twelve dozen dress collars. Andrew has always made a specialty of his laundry.

Arthur Kirley, one of our village urchins, while crossing the road the other day, stepped in front of the village steam roller. The engineer escaped uninjured.

Howard Taber, a newsboy in the employ of the village sheet, has lately been afflicted with chronic Newspaperitis. As the disease is contagious it is feared that he must have caught it from Stealthy Steve, another of our newsboys.

"How, When and Where to get Married," edited in pocket form by Zeus Paul, author of "How to Fuss."—Adv.

Deacon Johnson announces that his text for next Sunday will be, "Give me your flipper, and I will save you yet."

The earthquake felt in the village Tuesday was not an earthquake, but simply Jumbo's gas stove exploding.

Don Stone, our village editor, has hired a new Angora fur coat with Tiffany trimmings. The effect is something stupendous, but on the whole rather pleasing.

Johnny Bucher, superintendent of our perfume factory, has just invented a new smell. A red flag will be displayed at half mast whenever the smell is working.

There was considerable excitement in the village when an apparent fire was discovered in Hope College last Wednesday evening. But the blaze disappeared when Louis Meader withdrew his head from an open window. To avoid such alarms in the future a petition is on foot to prevent Louis from making any more public displays of his head.

Miss Beatrice Fairfax Regnier, our handsome brunette, will start her beauty talk series next Saturday night in the Grange Hall. Her first subject will be, "The Chemistry of the Face."

The London Times announced recently that the Hon. William Miller, of this village, ambassador to the Court of St. Stephens, while walking along the Strand was mistaken for Lord D. Liverus by many of the nobility.

It is rumored that there is keen rivalry between Larrabee and Babcock for the most conspicuity in the village.

FRESHMAN GYMNASTS

The Triumph of Truth

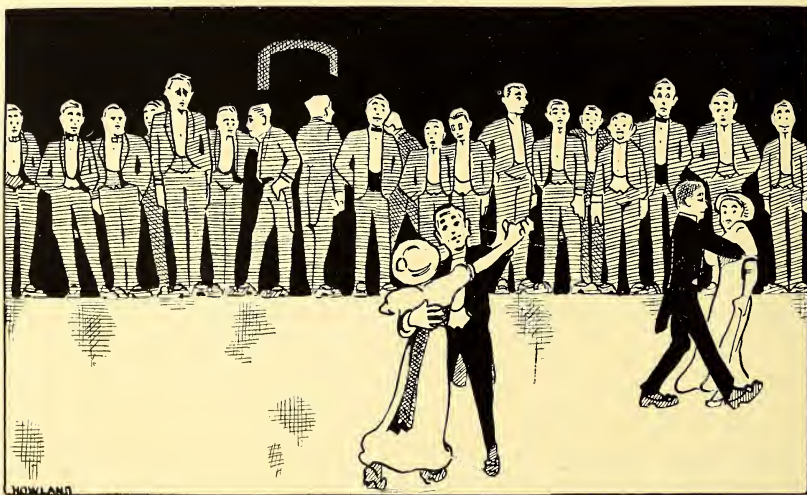

The benevolent face of Professor Dealey beamed beneficently upon the silent but studious circle of social-service seekers. "Of course, in our more modern civilization imitation has lost much of its effectiveness as a social force," the professor was saying.

The florid faces of forty four-flushers retained their reticent rubicundity, dreading the danger of appearing to entertain an opinion. Then, a gulping gasp of earnest eagerness smote the sober silence of the gifted gathering. A handsome hand shot swiftly skyward, and waved weirdly in wild wantonness, as if determined to detach the arrow-like arm from the sinewy shoulder.

"Yes, Mr. Mayer?"

"Pardon me, Professor, but I am certain that imitation is still a powerful social force. I have spent the last few evenings at the Municipal Lodging House [cries of "You mean nights!"] with the tramps. Now, invariably, if the first man we question there says he had several years in school, all we question afterward say the same. Again, if you are in New York City on New Year's Night, I know from actual experience that you can kiss the most respectable woman in town,—if you are both in a receptive mood. Now these are both examples of the power of imitation as a social force among Americans, the most enlightened race of earth."

Professor Dealey hangs his head, but descends dazed from the dais, and motions the mighty Mayer to ascend and occupy the vacant chair. The youthful phenomenon plants his feet upon the planks of the platform. All save the seer kneel in a noiseless prayer for the visitation of a vision of the triumphant torch of truth. Rising, they are rewarded by the sight of Mayer applying the live coal to his lips in the form of a sweet-smelling cigarette.

HOW THE STAG LINE AT THE GYM BALL LOOKED TO THE DANCERS

The following is a copy of a letter received by Albert Poland, concerning an advertisement which was appearing in the Brown Daily Herald:—

April 4, 1909.

MR. ALBERT POLAND,
Business Manager Brown Daily Herald,
Providence, R. I.

Dear Poland:—

I note the enclosed advertisement of the Hotel Westminster, of New York City, and while I presume you must be getting paid for running it, I wondered if you knew that it has been torn down, and ceased operating February 22, 1909. Seems to me the space should be worth "real money" to you, and it is certainly useless as an advertisement.

With best wishes,

PERCY SHIRES '06.

Both of these men have been inmates of the Rhode Island State Prison for upward of 21 years. The crimes for which they were sentenced were of a nature that startled the communities in which they occurred. Murphy was convicted of killing Waterman Irons, and Dorsey for the death of Benjamin Burton.

It would seem that Eddie McNally, 13, and Johnny Green, who says he is over 16, are doomed to trouble of some kind on their visits to this city from Fall River, where they come from. The lads are singers, and on their last appearance here, two weeks ago, they were not allowed to appear on the stage of the Imperial Theatre amateur night, the management decreeing that the bill was too long for more than a few of the embryo stars to "get the hook" or the prizes.

Last night Eddie and Johnny came once more to try their luck, it being amateur night again. They were more fortunate in one sense, for they were not only allowed to appear, but their efforts won so much applause that they were

Courses of Instruction at Brown University

When term courses are grouped in one paragraph (e. g., Astronomy 1, 2, 3), the second term may not be taken without the first, nor the third without the second, unless specific statement to the contrary is made. This was not devised primarily to confuse students, but is meant to reduce the number of changes of registration to a minimum. In starred courses a final mark covering the work of the course as a whole is given at the end of the course, in order to keep students in suspense; the mark given at the end of the preceding term or terms being regarded as temporary, so even if a student receives good marks for the first two terms it is no sign that he is going to pass the course.

I. Art

1, 2, 3. History of Art from the Garden of Eden Period until the Era of the Tailor and Dressmaker

First term, shows in what crude forms Art can exist. Second and third terms, although still rather crude, shows how some improvement was made as time went on. Lantern slides. No indecent statues. The hall is darkened and so is restful to the eyes.

II. Astronomy

1, 2, 3. General Course of Star Gazing

Stars as seen in the heavens, first balconies, and baldheaded rows. Designed for purposes of general culture. Six times a week, 8 to 10.30 P. M.

7, 8, 9. Nautical Astronomy

Principles of navigation up and down College Hill. Six times a week, 10.30 to 1 A.M.

III. Biblical Literature and History

1. Elementary Hebrew

Grammar exercises in speaking Hebrew, and obtaining a vocabulary so that the student can talk business with the secondhand clothes dealer. This course puts money into the student's pocket.

IV. Biology

1. Catology

Aims to give an introduction to laboratory methods of dissection and vivisection; to afford a general view of the inner workings, structure, and organs of unfortunate felines; and to present some of the most important tricks of the trade, such as the selection, mutilation, disposal, and hereafter of the cats used in the laboratory.

3. Bacteriology

A general discussion of invisible bugs; shows how one may have diphtheria germs tucked away safely in his throat and still not catch the disease.

18. Ornithology

A study of birds of a feather. Field identification of the different kinds seen on Westminster Street.

V. Botany

1. Introductory Course

Designed for those who desire to become Latin scholars or landscape artists.

VI. Chemistry

1, 2, 3. Descriptive Chemistry

An introduction to the different kinds of smells and explosions found in Rogers Hall. One hour a week is consumed in the laboratory, in which the student is expected to break and soil as much apparatus as he can in order to increase his term bill.

VII. Civil Engineering

4, 5, 6. Surveying, Elementary Course

Designed to use up the Spring vacation of the student's Sophomore year.

10, 11, 12, 13. Railroad Engineering

How to build a "theoretically practical" railroad; picnics and field work around the Ten Mile River.

VIII. Economics

1. Elementary Economics

Starts out with a long definition, and serves as a warning for those who are thinking of taking more extended courses in this department.

IX. English

1. Rhetoric and Composition

Designed to prove the theory of the survival of the fittest, to keep the student busy and increase his vocabulary in more ways than one, and to help the paper and ink industries.

7. * Public Speaking

Principles of Talkology, or how to throw a good bluff; continuous vaudeville.

50. The Modern Novel

A study of some of the recent modern novels, with the exception of "Three Weeks."

X. Geology

3. General Geology

Methods of obtaining rocks, and the development of the world's crust.

XI. Germanic Language and Literatures

1. Introductory Course

An opportunity for conversation is given the student so that he may acquire the German brogue. Students completing this course should be able to order food at the Hof Brau.

50. The Classical Literature of Germany in English

A methodical outline of the Encyclopaedia Britannica; a general survey of the world from the beginning, including study of Lessing, Schiller and Goethe.

XIII. History

1. Medieval and Modern History of Europe

Gives the student inside information about the private life of some well-known kings. Designed to give students the writer's cramp. Frequent written tests.

XIV. Indo-European Philology

1. Study of Language

How the first human tongue began to wag, and how it has continued to wag.

XV. Mathematics

3, 1, 2. Algebra, Geometry and Trigonometry

A required course for students expecting a degree. Students flunking this course in their Freshman year may have three more chances in their Sophomore, Junior and Senior years, respectively. Students who choose the eight o'clock division do so at their own risk, and must be awake, and at least half-dressed when they enter the class room.

XVI. Mechanical Engineering

1, 2, 3. Woodwork

Exercises in whittling pencils, driving nails and sandpapering.

25. Thesis

A thesis is required for those who desire a degree of M.E. The thesis cannot be copied outright from any book, magazine or catalogue.

XVIII. Philosophy

1. Logic

The limitations of human thinking. Discussions concerning truth and other absorbing questions of the day. A chance for students to "get in right."

XIX. Physics

1, 2, 3. Elementary Physics

Consists of three lectures a week, and a notebook to be handed in once a week. (For old notebooks see someone who has taken the course.) Designed for men who desire to know a very moderate amount of Physics, and desire to learn how to draw.

XX. Roman Literature and History

28, 29. Roman Life

Designed to show how sports used to live in the olden times. No knowledge of Latin required.

XXI. Romance Languages and Literatures

2, 3, 4. Intermediate Course

Designed for those students who intend to visit Paris in the near future, or who wish to read "Le College sur la Colline," Balzac, or De Maupassant in the original. This course is absolutely essential for membership in the "Cercle Francais."

26, 27, 28. Modern Italian

Grammar, composition and conversation to enable students to speak Dago fluently. Students intending to boss Italian gangs are advised to take advantage of this unusual opportunity.

35, 36, 37. Dante in English

A personally conducted tour through Hell, Purgatory and Heaven. The course is not half as bad as it sounds.

XXII. Social and Political Science

1. Elementary Political Science

Thrown out as a decoy to induce students to take advanced courses in this Department.

2. Social Institutions

Study of such vital social problems as tramp, servant girl and mother-in-law.

"THE EASIEST WAY"—HOW THE FRESHMAN FLUNKS OUT OF COLLEGE

Poor Richard's Philosophy

A trip to the Dean's office in time saves nine.

Look before you eat.

Never do a thing to-day that you can do to-morrow.

When the Prof's away, the students will play.

Many are called, but few get up to chapel.

Love not sleep, lest you oversleep chapel; open your eyes, and you will be satisfied with a breakfast.

A wise man is strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength in the gymnasium before his Senior year.

A wise student makes a glad father; but if the father becomes wise to the fact that his son is not wise the son gets most terribly in wrong.

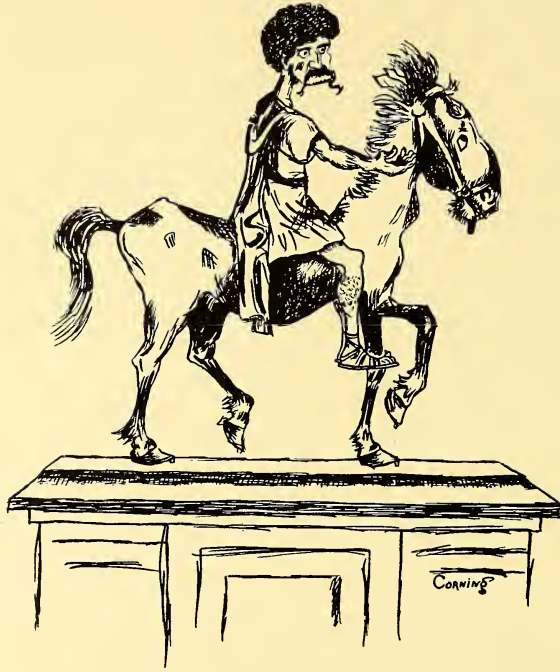

If at first you don't succeed in passing a course, try, try, Courtney.

An athlete up in his studies is worth two over nine hours behind.

It's a wise Freshman that knows his own student advisor.

It's a small alcove that has no co-ed.

A little work now and then is relished by even the best of professors.

Marcus Aurelius

“As we stand here, thrilled by the revelation of this imperial figure of the monarch, the great conqueror, the law-giver, the philosopher, we cannot merely scan its effective lines and value its shapely masses with the critical judgment of the connoisseur. We feel the power of the man whom the sculptor has represented; we can almost stand with the Roman populace, as it welcomes the victorious sovereign who extends his peace-bringing hand towards his people in benediction. This work, strongly realistic, triumphs over the limitations of the period of its production through its intense vitality and the noble ease and dignity that characterize both rider and horse.”

“The horse, indeed, is so life-like, that it may be a portrait of the favorite horse of the emperor, rightfully sharing with him the honor of the hardly won triumph. All the dress of the man, and the trappings of the horse, are true delineations of what was in use at the time. Ancient coins and medals bearing the portrait of Marcus Aurelius verify the fidelity of the likeness exhibited in this statue. The action is so proud and animated that it is said that Michelangelo, admiring it, addressed to it the word CAMMINA! “Advance!” The emperor, in his calm and dignified demeanor, monarch and philosopher at once, governing the applauding multitude by the movement of his outstretched hand, brings to them by his gesture the blessings of peace, and of his own benevolence.”

(Extracts from the speech of Professor Poland at the unveiling of Marcus Aurelius on June 1, 1908.)

Meditations of Marcus Aurelius

They tell of one Marcus Aurelius, who used to fish in the Tiber back in the second century, and who incidentally was Emperor of Rome. This first Marcus brought great fame to his name by his "Meditations," and as all the family of Marc are said to have been given to rumination it is not strange that Marcus Aurelius Brunensis should follow inherited traits, and be a good meditator.

It happened one night in late autumn that the Stoic Emperor expressed himself in words of comment to one of the Senior class, although the word of the Senior is not to be absolutely relied on, as he had been at an eruption of the Vesuvio Atwells Aviano during the greater part of the evening. The student had flowed up the hill in a poetic state of ethereal bliss, composing an "Owed to a Book Collector" as he went, and incidentally wondering whether Cap Cameron had gone to sleep in the boiler room, or was perched secretly in an elm tree to watch for men who might be in a poetic state of ethereal bliss. As the student passed the Emperor, he paused. The night was cold, and Marcus was thinly clad in his customary garb of "Holeproof" socks, and a bathrobe of Roman cut (see Tiberian Sheath Gown Co.). The student, being in a compassionate frame of mind, climbed up the pedestal, up a foreleg of the Senior hobby-horse, and perched himself before the Emperor, inquiring if he would like something hot. The Senior was unsure whether Marcus was versed in college slang, or still clung to that obsolete tuba, tubarum language, and consequently it was a pleasant surprise when Marc grinned, and replied, "No, thanks; I'm not galvanized inside." Silence for a minute. "How do you like this place?" asked the student. "Can't exactly express it," was the reply. "I haven't given a spiel to a college audience in years. Of course I used to meditate before the Philosophical Club of Tiber University, in fact I was at one time chief meditator; but this joint has got Tiber beaten to a frazzle. We didn't ever have a football team there, library education was unknown, and as for music, the most persistent gallery-god in college had never heard of 'Yama Man.'"

The student was of course mildly surprised at this strange statement, but he only remarked, "I take it you like Brown life," and Marc continued:—

"Great," he exclaimed, nudging his steed Billiken in the side, and winking out of his green eyes. "For instance, your system of picking track athletes is splendid. I understand that when the chapel bell rings Charlie Huggins stands in front of Sayles, and picks out the promising Dorando's as they Marathon across the campus. Those who get there after the doors are closed are, of course, dropped from the squad. I was deeply moved, too, by the eulogy pronounced over me by 'Don' Stone after the Junior Cruise last year concerning certain sides of my character, which Professor Poland had omitted when I was first stuck up here to be a college Penate. The bath, too, which I had last Class Night, was the best I've had since my body lay on its first bier back in the second century.

"But there are two queer things I've noticed about this joint. Sleep is never allowed to interfere with anything of a pleasanter nature, and clothes, at present, are crazy in style. Look at that Egyptian-traveller-oasis-green hat of Smith's. With that on he reminds me seriously of a man disguised as a toadstool. It's in a class with these agricultural wastebasket lids the girls are wearing—me for the toga and bare head. As for sleep, I haven't seen a student since I came here who looked as though he and Morpheus were any more closely related than second cousins by marriage. I am thinking seriously of writing a book, entitled, 'Rhodes, the Imperial, and Interfraternity Baseball,' or 'Why Brown Men Never Sleep.' It gets my goat to see a man wander sadly onto the campus to the accompaniment of an early milk wagon, and then crawl out shivering before the sun has got warmed up for the day to make errors on a frozen diamond, that the Herald may have a chance to misprint the score. Then, of course, is the man who burns the midnight oil seven nights a week, and sleeps the eighth. He walks in epicycloidal curves, eats his breakfast by the fourth dimension, and when he counts his money thinks he is doing a problem in Qualitative Analysis. Then there is the man who knows no music but the swish of skirts, and whose only use for men is to borrow money in order to take his infinity to a dance. He has six dances a week, and sits up the rest of the time reading Marie Corelli and the 'Fighting Chance.' If there were twenty-five hours in each day, these fellows would get just seven hours sleep a week."

Just then the student noticed that Cap had stopped snoring in the engine room, and he prepared to leave. "Is there anything I can do for you?" he asked. "Yes," replied Marc, "Get the grass cut around me. My horse doesn't like green stuff, and it looks like E. B. Dane's face when he needs a shave." With these words the Stoic resumed his wonted composure, and the student beat it for his room, setting his alarm clock for 8.58.

The Senior Table

It is the hour of six o'clock, and a dozen men are seated about the Senior table in the Bohemian restaurant in the Union basement. The cream of the class is here, its finest minds, its greatest, if not most famous, athletes, its most brilliant exponents of the "Life Togethah." And first there is Butler: his massive chest nearly bursts the buttons on his well-cut waistcoat and his genial smile radiates refulgent gladness upon all who behold. Then there are Stone and Hughes, partners in many a newspaper crime; Sturgis, his round face flushed from the effort of his walk across the campus; Chase, ever trying out on this assemblage the jokes with which he purposes to disfigure this eminent publication, while Lake yells, "Crude, crude"; Buffum and Wells, future holders of the Marathon title; Church, his face transfigured with the triumphant smile of a pool victory, and Buss, the silent member. But there is another figure at the table. Who is that? It is Chambers. But why sits he thus disconsolate and isolated, far away from the merry throng? He is a devotee of the odoriferous chemicals of Rogers Hall, and their fumes will remain with him even unto the third and fourth generation. So, though the gladsome gurgle of his girlish giggle is pleasant to the ear, the Seniors cannot abide him at meals.

And presiding over the festivities is the immaculate French waiter, Raque, dispensing the food-stuffs with a practiced precision, careful to discriminate down whose neck he shall pour the luke-warm soup or whose face he shall smear with the omnipresent squash, and ever bellowing his hellish battle cry, "NO SOIDES."

But the hour of 6.30 is at hand. The Seniors have finished their feast: the last "cup of" has been drunk and the last story told (when this last event happened Butler left the table): Church has concluded the account of his fortunes at the great American game, and Lake has finished his latest vaudeville skit. Billy Buffum is dispensing "the makings," Hughes is blowing through his pipe, and Stone has his Manual Garcia in his face. (Stone has one of the Union boys trained so that when he asks for a Manual Garcia he will be handed an Old Coon; such is the road to fame.) Just then Raque's impassive face becomes livid with rage, for just coming through the door is Jim Dean, and the time is 6.40. He deluges the table with an overturned glass of milk and curses fate while Dean murmurs apologetically: "Sorry, Raque, couldn't get here any sooner. I was chasing protoplasm with a magnet over in Rhode Island Hall; and just caught it."

If—

If Tanner had but Prexy's rep—
 For speeches far and near,
 With Professor Wilson's knowledge,
 And our music teacher's ear;
 With Johnny Bucher's Chemistry,
 And Courtney Langdon's "Hell,"
 Could he teach things better than they're taught,
 Or could he do as well?

If chapel should perchance be dropped,
 And the bell that rings at nine,
 Should never ring till ten o'clock,
 We'd think it pretty fine.
 But if the thing should come to pass,
 Would we be happy then?
 Would we get up to eat at eight,
 Or sleep right through till ten?

If Krause had taken English 1
 A dozen times or more,
 And tutored up in English Comp,
 And written themes galore;
 And if the Herald board entire
 Had conquered grammar's terrors;
 O, would our Herald then be free
 From typographic errors?

Suggestions

When the football season is with us once more, and the merry crackling and crunching of bones, the dull thud of head against stomach, and the scraping of spiked shoes across manly physiognomies will re-echo from the turbulent gridiron, we humbly recommend the following treatment to any of Brown's grim warriors who, at the end of a grueling first half feel their vitality exhausted or ebbing away:—

Alcohol or a toilet water applied to the wrists and temples is extremely invigorating. A saturated solution of borax is also found beneficial for this purpose.

We also wish to respectfully submit the following recipe for the consideration of our physical director in the training of the incoming Freshmen, who need some additional exercise besides that given in the Gymnasium:—

Deep breathing will help to reduce the waist measure, and enlarge the bust. The stretching exercises, too, are splendid as waist depleters. Raise the arms high above the head; then, holding the knees straight, try to touch the floor with the fingertips. Stand erect, place hands on hips, bend from waist as far as possible to the right, then to the left.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfacts

MAY BE ANGRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFACTS:

While in Providence this year I met a young man, named "Kit," whom I think a great deal of, and I think he likes me. I promised him that I would write when I returned to Peabody, and I did so. He has not answered my letter, and I am all broken up. How can I get him to write to me?

ANXIOUS.

I think you might try once more. He may be angry at something, and as time goes on his anger may cool. At any rate it would not hurt to try, so take my advice and call or write once more.

INDEED? IT WOULD NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFACTS:

I am a young girl, and have been in love with a young college youth, whom I met at Rhodes. He has a very handsome face, which dimples very prettily every time he laughs. Although he would not tell me his name I heard one of his friends call him "Larry." Do you think it would be proper to call him up by telephone?

HEARTBROKEN.

Put this foolish idea out of your head, and do not think of anything so undignified as jollying him through the telephone. It would be much better to write him. If he thinks you are worth a nickel he will probably call you up.

THAT'S FAIR ENOUGH

DEAR MISS FAIRFACTS:

I am a poor married man. In search of peace I roam. Would you advise me to take up graduate work next year at Brown University, or leave college, and take my medicine like a man?

I know exactly how you feel, but still I do not want to advise you in this matter.

TAKE NO CHANCES

DEAR MISS FAIRFACTS:

The other evening a college man, named Kirley, came to call on me. I sat down on the sofa, and before I realized it he was seated by my side. I soon found that he was a whole crowd in himself, but before I could move the springs of the sofa began to groan, and finally the whole sofa broke down. Where would you advise me to sit the next time he calls?

NERVOUS.

I think the floor is the only safe place if you wish to save the furniture.

Fooled 'Em Again, George

Prof. Munro (confidentially): "I consider Mr. Carroll a real student. I have known many men who have occasionally done brilliant work, but they have not been consumed by the same thirst for knowledge. Mr. Carroll is different. His is genuine scholarship."

An example of George's genuine scholarship and thirst for knowledge in History 3: Carroll—"Professor, what is the difference between eating eels and eating snakes?" Prof. Munro—"Why, Mr. Carroll, I should say that the difference lay in the character of the food eaten."

OUR OTHER CAMPUS FRIEND

On the Campus Green

"Father, is there war with England, are the British in our land ?

Are the foreign lions pacing on our sacred native strand ?
See that tall young fellow yonder with the military hat
That the British wear in Egypt and the Straits of Cattagat—
Awful looking!"—"Hush, my children, we're accustomed to Smith's hat."

"Father, see that splotch of green paint on the pavement over there.

Has some naughty Dartmouth student dared invade old Bruno's lair ?

Oh, ye gods, it is a headpiece ! what a monstrous looking lid !

See, two legs beneath are moving, but the owner's face is hid—

Ain't it awful!"—"Hush, my children, cast no slurs on Richard's lid."

"Father, what a funny object just now vanished through that door,

Does it not suggest to you a smokestack on a man of war ?
High and round and black and shiny—does it not weigh down his head ?

Many like it worn among us would awake and grieve the dead—

Awful funny!"—"Hush, my children, proper thing on Prexy's head."

SENIOR DAY

Yo ho! Yo ho! Yo ho!

Everyone was happy, everyone was gay,
 Everyone was sailing,
 Sailing down the bay.
 The boat was full of Juniors,
 They were full of booze,
 And everyone was happy
 On the Junior Cruise.

The Cruise of the Ancient Mariner

An ancient mariner
 stoppeth three Brown
 men in the year 1979.

It is an Ancient Mariner,
 And he stoppeth three Brown
 men,
 "By my Junior pipe and peg top
 pants,
 Pray let me go again.

The time is set, the class is met
 And we are Juniors three.
 A Junior cruise with lots of booze
 Is waiting soon for me."

Mention of the 1909
 Class cruise causeth
 the Juniors to listen.

The Mariner spake, "In 1908
 We Juniors took a sail,"
 His listeners listened listening,
 The Mariner told his tale.

The Squantum
saileth well provi-
sioned.

The class was cheered, the boat well beered,
The Squantum cleared the bay.
All marching, led by Chase's drum,
The Juniors sailed away.

The sun had risen on the left,
And on the right would sink,
Which proves that we were sailing South ;
Good logic that, I think.

No storm o'ertook us on our way,
Although the sky o'ercast
Betokened lots of H_2O ,
If four kegs should not last.

Good spirit prevailleth.

Within the shadow of the ship,
Real joy and spirit reigned.
The miles were quickly covered
Until Field's Point was gained.

The class eateth
clams.

The class in long line landed,
Where tables waited set,
And there with talk and laughter,
Each ate what he could get.

Westervelt speaketh.

'Mid great applause rose Westervelt,
His speech has brought him fame.
To our "cosmos in general,"
He spoke with words of flame.

The ship arriveth
at Rocky Point in due season.

Ball game. Champlin getteth busy
and chaseth a cow.

No Webster in the Trojan war,
No Richmond could repeat it,
No Burke in Dido's Parliament,
Could ever hope to beat it.

But when his silver tongue had ceased,
And closed his mighty mouth,
Then shipward trooped the boisterous crew,
And set sail to the South.

The band was restless when at last
From the Narragansett's tides
We disembarked for further sport,
And played baseball besides.

Our A. B.'s played the Engineers—
'Twas culture versus brawn;
While Champlin chased a sportive cow,
Grass-fed there since the dawn.

Oh, who can tell the life and cheer
That reigned there unconfined,
When Westie called the game at dusk,
And left the Point behind.

The class starteth back.

The sun was setting on our left,
Which makes it pretty plain
That we who had been sailing South
Were sailing back again.

The mariners drink
not of the sea.

Water, water everywhere
From there to our next stop.
We used it all to sail upon,
And never drank a drop.

They reach the Heights.

'Twas dark, the moon shone when we reached
The Heights of Junior joy;
And we who next year played the man
Disported, each a boy.

They slide bases.

"Spike" Dennie led base sliding squads,
Requirements—strength and grace,
Upon that highly polished floor
A perfect sliding place.

A PERFECT SLIDING PLACE

At last we left the realm of fun,
And sailed without a pause
Until we reached the Squantum dock,
About moon-set it was.

They spoil the sleep of the city.

The loud notes of the Junior song
Disturbed the city's sleep,
And woke the early-go-to-beds
Up where the hill is steep.

A crowning feat there yet remained.
Full long will history tell
What glorious deeds to 1909
On that one night befell.

They allow Marcus Aurelius to stay on the campus.

'Mid sad impressive silence
A speaker spoke, they say,
And told the Emperor Marc that he Could on our campus stay."

The Mariner stopped in memories wrapped,
 He neither spoke nor heard.
 The Juniors gravely walked away
 To bed without a word.

The Juniors go to chapel as in days of old.

But ever in their memory
 Remained the Mariner's rime.
 And wiser men the morrow morn
 They rose at chapel time.

"KIT, HANDSOMEST MAN IN U. S. A."

REGNIER CALLED 'KIT, HANDSOMEST MAN IN U. S. A.'

Popular Brown Athlete Gets Photograph from Fair Admirer in Peabody, Mass. Addressd in Rhyme.—New Sobriquet May Stick.

When "Kit" Regnier, Brown's all-around athlete, went down stairs in Brunonia Hall, 175 Thayer street, this morning, to get his mail, he was greeted by a howling crowd of students. The foremost held in his hand a flat package, much resembling a photograph, mailed from Peabody, Mass. The package was addressed as follows:

"Kit, the handsomest man in the U. S. A."

"A well known athlete, so they say."

"At Brown University, and him, I pray."

"In Providence, R. I., without delay."

The writing was in a feminine hand, and "Kit" was congratulated by all upon having made such a "strike" with the fair sender of the photograph. The joke got about college and before long "Kit" earned the nickname of "Handsome," which undoubtedly will hang to him through the rest of his college term, and maybe longer.

A canvass has been going on at the Hall among the boys who come from Peabody, in the hope of discovering who the girl is who sent her photograph to "Kit" addressed in the poetical manner. Up to 2 o'clock this afternoon no trace of the fair creature had been found.

Modernism

The rows of chairs, the simple desk, the bare plastered walls, and the large, plain windows, all served to give a stern appearance to Room P. The electric lights on the ceiling looked grim, the silent piano added to the funereal aspect, and even Westervelt took on a solemn countenance. Everyone kept silence until Selleck, with an intellectual look, seated himself at the desk, and called the meeting to order.

"Gentlemen," he said, "There is no special question before the Philosophical Club for solution this evening, and the floor is open to discussion on any topic."

Here George Carpenter, unlighted pipe in mouth, interrupted the chairman by leaning over and whispering to his neighbor, "A-a-pardon me, but do you have any non-safety matches."

Selleck proceeded, "At our last meeting we heard an excellent report on The Cardinal Virtue by Mr. Westervelt, and on Religion and Science by Mr. Carpenter. If anyone wishes he can proceed along those lines of discussion."

Hughes, carefully adjusting his necktie, arose with a look of determination. "Gentlemen," he said, assuming a debating posture, "I am inclined to differ with Mr. Westervelt's idea of what the cardinal virtue is, and to believe that it is truth. Thus, for an example, we might consider the Herald as a cardinal virtue, for it is ever truthful, while the yellow journals of Boston and New York are, to speak in direct opposition, cardinal vices."

Here Keenan jumped to his feet. "Mr. Chairman," was the start of his flow of old-time southern oratory, "How can we consider truth a cardinal virtue when we don't know what it is?"

All the philosophers smiled, and even the electric lights twinkled with merriment.

"Do you mean by your statement that its practice is unknown, or its quality?"

Westervelt arose ponderously. "The gentlemen are quibbling," quoth he. "For truth is a thing which is known and practiced only before the absence committee, the—"

A howl of pain proceeded from the meeting, and a motion was passed, making it a misdemeanor to argue on The Cardinal Virtue again.

Then, with a gracefulness seldom seen, and with a smile of angelic sweetness, George Carpenter took the floor. "I have been discussing metaphysics with a prominent member of the Faculty, and not even a visit to Logic 1 has been able to convince me that the theories of metaphysicians are not like hunting for a cat in a dark room when the cat is not there. Had the cat been there it would probably not have been found unless the lights were turned on, but as it was not there, even lights would not find it. This point, gentlemen, will, I think, be appreciated by everyone." Even Westervelt assumed an intelligent look, and Cooke forgot that he needed sleep in order to agree with George. Keenan rose for another outburst, but was floored when he remembered that Bryan had been defeated. Then someone moved adjournment.

Quickly arising, George Carpenter asked for recognition. "Mr. Chairman, before we adjourn I would like to read to you a short poem from my notebook, entitled, 'And she had a boozy twinkle in her eye.'"

Shrieks, murderous shrieks, arose. The lights blushed for shame, and Arthur Pope held his fingers to his ears. Westervelt laughed, and Hughes, wearing a shocked look, left the room. Amid wild disorder Selleck moved the meeting closed.

Les Contes Drolatiques

By PROFESSOR UNO of Brown University

Published by Sharpers, 1909

"Christina the Beautiful Swede," a tale of the Scandinavian Peninsula. How a beautiful Swedish girl lived for ten years in Providence, R. I., and then, returning to her native land, secured, because of her American accent, a job as hello-girl in a Stockholm central.

"A tale of powerful pathos, the introduction of the 'central' giving it a pleasant hilarious turn, which somewhat counteracts the tragedy."—New York Moon.

"Little Christina is a lady, a scholar and a good judge of hops."—Cincinnati Snooze.

"The Mystery of Rubens' Wives," or "The Influence of Women on Painting." How the pictures Rubens painted in the latter half of his life were larger than those he painted in the first half, because his second wife was fatter than his first.

"A tale of immense strength. The dramatic climax in which Rubens is reduced to the position of keeper of a confectionery store is well drawn."—Illustrated Gazelle.

"Very original."—Bumseys.

"The Spunk of the Donk," or "Saved by the Turn of a Finger." A powerful story, in which the hero and his donkey fall over a cliff in the Andes, the hero being saved by hanging to a tree by the second finger of his left hand.

"The scene in which the donkey splashes into the river below, after falling for eighteen minutes, twenty seconds and the fraction of a second, is especially good."—Louisville Lyre.

"A Grimm Tale."—Bingville Bugle.

"Saved by a Pop," the tale of a winter's eve. How a barn filled with corn catches fire, but the corn pops, spreads and smothers the flames.

"A story of interest to children."—School Companion.

"The Maypole and the Elephant," or "The Pets of George I." How the Hanoverian successor to Queen Anne won the love of the English people by his kindness to animals.

"The professor is to be complimented on his deep research work."—Review of Refuse.

Nearly Tanked

(The humor of this extract from the Herald was thought to be worthy of the LIBER.)

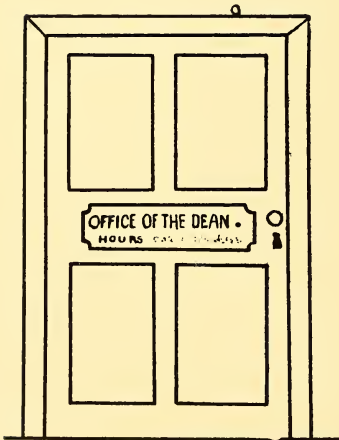

George W. G. Carpenter, a prominent member of the Junior class, narrowly escaped a sad and most untimely end, while musing up the waters of the Colgate Hoyt Swimming Pool, yesterday afternoon. Having the erroneous impression that he was at the shallow end of the tank he attempted to place his feet upon the beautifully polished bottom, but was both surprised and mortified to find himself suddenly and inadvertently precipitated into eight feet of cold, black water. Although, the Herald understands, his melodramatic plunge caused no commotion, a series of hurried bubbles informed "Spring Sonnet" Murphy, his companion, of his plight, and he heroically rushed to Mr. Carpenter's rescue. The latter assumed a half-Nelson hold on his helper that was only shaken off by a Water Polo kick, but he was finally pulled to safety, and rolled on a barrel.

When interviewed by a Herald reporter, Mr. Carpenter said that he had nothing to give out for publication, except that he took his unfortunate mishap—as always—philosophically.

A Study in Perfection

The violet rays of the setting sun cast a mellow glow over the paper littered desk, soft fragrant breezes are wafted through the open windows and cool his fevered cheeks, dreamily he allows his handsome eyes to wander over the campus landscape. His brown hair is neatly combed and in its waves the little puffs of air dance and quiver, his finely chiselled face is clean shaven, and every line stands out in relief with the exactness of a Greek god's, his tie and collar and shirt are immaculate, his suit bespeaks its own elegance and good taste. As he watches the branches of the stately elms sway to and fro and the distant horizon fades from a brilliant gold into a royal purple, his keen brain produces the wonderful flow of language which he is to introduce into his next speech, and then he remembers the athletic fields and his grace in leading cheers. With a smile of well earned pleasure, he shakes himself drowsily and then his shapely fingers race over page after page of paper as he composes a beautiful lyric or a masterpiece in prose.

Why should he not be satisfied and content? Is he not hailed as a man of wide prominence, is it not true that no college function is complete without him, does he not control the literary life of Brown and her track athletes as well? Yes, it is Larrabee, Southern Gentleman!

VERY MUCH IN EARNEST

TO THE EDITORS OF THE LIBER,

Gentlemen and Newt Chase:—

Since the Herald, which talks only about keeping off the grass and on the water wagon, and the Brunonian, which is a knocker, have failed to eradicate, correct or otherwise change the wrongs which permeate, stain, and diffuse themselves through our life together, I lay before you, our greatest free thinkers and free speakers, my list of grievances.

Wrongs, gentlemen and Newt Chase, are everywhere, and in all phases of our college life. How, for instance, can any modest, bashful and forbearing man feel comfortable when George Hill wanders into the poolroom, and tells everything in his life history that may happen to reflect credit on George Hill? Or how can anybody who has a naturally quiet disposition (such as Jim Dean) live within three miles of Keith Mercer?

I speak with the words of wisdom, too, when I say that a poor man will have no chance at Brown as long as a certain gentleman, who is behind the bars in the Administration Building, greets pleasantly those who must take make-ups, change their courses or register late. And why do we allow Raquet to go about unchained, realizing, as we do, that a playful tap from him is like unto a solar plexus from a regular-sized man? And why does Bogle have to smile all the time, and why are egg sandwiches ten cents a piece in the Union Restaurant? Why doesn't Joe Church ever have the makings, and who ever told Babington he is good looking? My feelings are scathed and injured. I ask you to make a noise like a reformer, and erase these social evils. Thanks,

ONE WHO COGITATES.

LOOK!

ADVERTISEMENTS

Brunonian Calendar

- SEPT. 22 Last day of registration. Keith Mercer shows his urbanity and goodwill by giving the glad hand to all Freshmen coming up the hill. Some Freshman posters go up during the night while others go down.
- SEPT. 23 Academic year begins. The Herald buys a carload of guaranteed brand new typographical errors to spring upon us. President Faunce welcomes the Freshmen at the opening chapel service, extending to them the use of our academic lawns and playgrounds.
- SEPT. 24 Freshmen victorious in Flag Rush. Sophomores capture two out of three wrestling matches.
- SEPT. 25 Y. M. C. A. reception in Sayles Hall. Johnson '09 introduces Prexy after telling a donkey story. Even Prexy saw the point. Hee haw!
- SEPT. 26 The gridiron artists appear for the first time. Brown 34, New Hampshire State 0. Herald notice: "All Freshmen who have ever played baseball will report on Lincoln Field in uniform, on Thursday, September 29th, at three P. M., for fall football practice. This does not mean any men who happen to be on the baseball squad."
- SEPT. 28 Don Stone is heard to remark that he is so well off, financially, this year that he will not have to use Waldorf Lunch napkins for handkerchiefs any longer.
- SEPT. 29 The Managing Editor of the Herald finds difficulty in thinking up enough typographical errors for the next day's issue.
- SEPT. 30 Brown 35, Bates 4.
In public speaking, Professor Crosby, "You did not speak that passage very well, Mr. Sherwood." Sherwood (absent-mindedly), "Well, that's a hell of a long passage."
- OCT. 1 Courtney Langdon announces in Italian 35 that he is stuck on himself.
- OCT. 2 Enthusiastic mass meeting. Even Jim Dean loosens up.
- OCT. 3 Brown 6, Colgate 0. Another case of the side line trick winning a game. Colgate certainly gave us a "close shave."
- OCT. 5 Brown Daily Herald, "The new refectory got what might be termed an official try-out Friday evening, when President Faunce ate his supper there." The Herald evidently has a little humor lurking around in its columns.
- OCT. 6 Courtney Langdon, "Have you read Raven's Poe?"
- OCT. 7 Tinkham '09 in C. E. 23, "I have nothing to say." The class collapses.
- OCT. 8 Professor Poland in Art 1, "Mr. Muir, what were the characteristics of the walls at Tiryns." W. E. Muir, "They were frenzied affairs."
- OCT. 9 Posted on the Union Bulletin board: "Well's Algebra for sale. Used by all Freshmen. Hardly used."
- OCT. 10 Brown 12, Bowdoin 0.

::: Facts ::: About Hall & Lyon Co.

THE phenomenal growth of the Hall & Lyon Co. and their constant development from an ordinary drug business to the largest retailers of drugs and medicines in New England means something. There is a reason for it. The business has not grown of itself, but is the result of a definite determined policy which has been carried out. The Hall & Lyon Co. have grown, and are growing. Because they have given the public the best goods. Because they have given the public the best goods at the lowest possible prices. Because they have employed only men of ability in every department. Because every employee has been chosen and is employed on account of that employee's ability to fill the particular place which he occupies. Because they have told the public by varied and persistent advertising what they have to sell. Because they have kept all their promises, advertised or not, and so have secured the absolute confidence of the public. Because they supply the public with only the best of goods — they care for the public's interest with only the best of service.

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS

Now located in its new home at 15 Craigie St.
 Larger and lighter laboratories and lecture rooms.
 Spacious grounds. Better facilities in every way.

Students desiring admission must present satisfactory evidence of having a good moral character, good mental and physical health, and sufficiently high educational fitness.

The College Staff, including hospital and dispensary, numbers thirty-four members.

The course of study covers a period of three years of nine months each.

The classes are of moderate size, and much valuable individual instruction is given the students. Our dispensary in Chelsea has succeeded beyond expectations. Nearly fifteen thousand calls have been answered in this department since its opening, representing minor surgical and accident cases, infectious diseases, eye, ear, nose, throat and dental cases, also a large number of obstetrical, gynecological and skin cases.

The dispensary is open every morning and evening, with osteopathic practitioners in constant attendance.

Examining days for the osteopathic clinic: Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, 2 to 3 P. M. Make appointments in advance.

The student receives a full year of clinical demonstrations—osteopathic and surgical.

The next class will matriculate in September, 1909.

Tuition, $150 per annum, including dissecting material and all privileges.
